

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

PREFACE.

Two considerations have chiefly induced me to write the following pages.

The first is that inquiries are not unfrequently made, both by priests and lay people, concerning our brethren of the Second Province. The desired information is not forthcoming without much reading and study. When tracing one individual, you fall in with others, for whom you may again have to look ere long. It appears therefore desirable to collect all the evidence, from which inquirers may be able to glean what they seek.

In the second place I feel convinced that the subject matter of this work is in itself edifying. The various details of the history of the illustrious Order of St. Francis, which is bound up with the history of the Catholic Church, and the incidents connected with the English Franciscan Province, which has supplied many labourers for the English missions, are well worthy of our attention. And those who peruse this book will, I trust, not spend their time unprofitably.

As I wish to be understood by all, and some of my readers are perhaps not well acquainted with the Franciscan Order, I have thought it necessary to give, as briefly as possible, a general idea of the Order, and also of the first English Franciscan Province. This will be found in Chapters II. and III.

In a few cases where useful information could be gathered from existing authors, I have thought it but right to avail myself of it, and reference to these sources will be found in the proper places. With these few exceptions all the materials for this work have been collected from the writings of the old Franciscans.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.

FATHER ANTHONY PARKINSON, in his remarkable work on the Antiquities of the English Franciscans, in which he gives the history of the first Province of the Order in England, also makes mention of the foundation of the second by Father Gennings, and then adds : " But I will not go beyond my prefixed bounds of the old Province. So I leave the history of the new one for a better head and pen than mine are."

It is to be regretted that a man of his learning and ability did not bring down the history to his own day ; he would have covered a century full of interesting events, then, in a manner, still fresh in men's minds, and consequently easier to chronicle ; and he would thus have lightened the task of whosoever should carry on his work. But we must also admit that it is not always safe or prudent to narrate events that are still in a manner present, or the effects of which have not passed away. Now, however, we can confidently take up the pen, and treat the subject before us without fear of giving offence to anyone.

The English Franciscan Recollects have undoubtedly deserved well of Religion and of their country. They had generally about forty fathers on the English mission, when times were bad and priests were scarce, whilst others, on the other side of the Channel, almost within sight of our shores, were engaged in training future missionaries, or endeavouring by every means in their power to promote both the spiritual and temporal welfare of English nuns. No one can gainsay Father Parkinson's statement: "One truth," he says, "I dare venture to assert, which is that, considering the time of its date, and slender number of its members, this second Province is as holy and as learned as the former, and may vie with any community of English religious men." Let it not be thought that these words are mere idle boasting: the second Province counted men of talent, learning and piety. It had its glorious band of martyrs and confessors of the faith. It possessed men filled with zeal and charity: they worked well, and worked with fruit. From among many instances, we take by way of illustration Father Hall's list of converts, taken from a letter dated May 8, 1737.

At that time Father Hall had probably been about a dozen years on the mission.

Does not a shadow of sadness pass across our minds when we reflect that this glorious second Province dwindled away and is no more! But Divine Providence cannot be mistaken in its wise dispositions: God knows how His glory can best be promoted. When the second Province was as it were at the last gasp, and the Franciscan Order was all but extinct in England, it suddenly seemed to rise to a new life, like the phenix from its ashes. And as the seal of the first Province had been handed to Father Gennings by one who was its last representative, so once again the seal of the second was delivered by the old Franciscans to their brethren, who have long used it.

A very interesting and rather complex question presents itself here, which we shall try to answer. What caused the decline of this once flourishing English Franciscan Province? To attribute it solely to the violent suppression of the establishment at Douai would seem to be a mistake. The loss of St. Bonaventure's College was indeed one of the causes; but let us consider other facts which, if less striking, are none the less real. Father Gennings and his companions proposed to themselves, as their primary object, self-sanctification and perfection by means of religious observance; then afterwards the mission, the salvation of souls, the conversion of England. Young men were trained and moulded at Douai, but when ordained, only those who were judged fit were allowed to come to England; the others were kept in Flanders. Those that came were apostolic men, real missionaries, filled with a desire for martyrdom. But as time went on, residences were multiplied, and for these fathers had to be found. The secondary object was taking the place of the primary end. Moreover, circumstances had changed here in England: there was no longer any fear of being cast into prison, hanged, drawn and quartered for being a priest; religion was reviving and spreading; the Church was resuming by degrees its normal condition. It is questionable whether the Religious Orders were worth preserving as they then were; or had the time not rather come for putting them on their proper footing? A regular must live in community, in the observance of his rule; otherwise he will by degrees lose the religious spirit.

Scarcely had the eighteenth century reached the middle of its course when we begin to perceive a diminution in the number of vocations for the Franciscan Province. It looked as if the cessation of the persecution, and the peace and security which English Catholics began to enjoy, had lessened their religious fervour, and the charity of many seemed to be growing cold. The scarcity steadily increased, and made itself more felt as time went on, causing no small amount of apprehension and inconvenience.

But, it may be urged, there were fathers enough left after the French Revolution to form communities. I answer first that for some years the Franciscans hoped against hope that they would ultimately recover their house at Douai. Besides, the formation of regular communities is not the work of a day: places and means must be found. The fact is, that the fathers wished to form communities here in England, and did all they could for this object. But by the time it became possible, a quarter of a century had elapsed. Then, to bring the old fathers together, and make a properly conducted community of them, was next to impossible. It is necessary to begin with the young, and fashion them after the proper pattern: old trees do not bear transplanting. And how can men teach others what they have never learned themselves?

The Franciscan Order in England was, however, not to die, but to be renewed. The work was done in an almost imperceptible manner; everything took, as it were, its natural course. But the end was obtained: God had directed men's efforts.

The closing years of the second Province had a lustre of their own. We cannot but be filled with admiration at the sight of a handful of veterans and jubilarians, protesting their undying love for the Order of St. Francis, and vowing to do all in their power to continue the work. Unsuccessful yet noble efforts in God's cause, mingled with such names as those of Bishops Collingridge and Hendren, Fathers Richards and McDonnell, and last but not least, Father O'Farrell, whose memory is still cherished in the places where he laboured, spread a halo of glory around its tomb. Sepulchrum ejus gloriosum.

CHAPTER II.

THE FRANCISCAN SPIRIT.

THE Franciscan Order possesses a peculiar attraction which has captivated many souls generously disposed towards God from the very beginning of its institution. The striking character of the founder, no doubt, largely contributed to its success. But besides this it has a prominent feature, a distinctive mark, which consists in the manner in which the children of the seraphic patriarch observe the Gospel counsel of holy poverty.

For although the three solemn vows of obedience, chastity and poverty are common to all religious, there is in the manner in which these vows are observed, according to the nature of the rule and constitutions of each Order, almost as great a variety as there is in the different habits worn by the members.

As regards the observance of the vow of evangelical poverty in particular, it is scarcely possible to describe it more clearly and accurately than Father John Baptist Weston in his explanation of the rule of the Friars Minor. In this work he embodies the doctrine of the Fathers and saints. And as he was a prominent member of the Seraphic Order when the second Province of the English Franciscans was in full life and vigour, it is almost a duty for us to let him speak on this subject. Here are his words.

“Behold here a perfect disinheriting of ourselves, forsaking all worldly goods for God’s sake, purely with the intention of serving Him with greater freedom. And this is holy and meritorious, as Pope Nicholas says, in his declaration on the rule. This Christ Jesus our Lord and Master, showing to mankind the way of perfection, has taught by word and example. This his apostles and first disciples have likewise practised, according to the counsel He gave to the young man in the Gospel, when He said, ‘If thou wilt be perfect, go sell what thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, follow me.’

“But to give my reader a more clear and exact notion of our Franciscan poverty, and distinguish it from that of other Orders, it will be necessary to take notice, that there are three sorts of renunciations of temporal goods, which are more or less perfect according to their different degree.

“The first degree is of those who, living in the world, retain to themselves the property and dominion of all they possess, as money, lands, houses, goods, cattle, yet are free from all covetousness, and without setting their affections upon their treasures, but using them according to religion and justice; and out of devotion giving part of them to supply the wants of the poor, as occasion requires. And these are the poor in spirit, though rich in substance, who follow the counsel of the royal prophet: ‘If riches abound, set not your heart upon them’ (Ps. lxi.); and of whom it is said in another psalm: ‘He hath distributed, he hath given to the poor : his justice remaineth for ever and ever : his horn shall be exalted in glory ' (Ps. cxi.)

" The second degree belongs to those who, in particular and as to their own persons, renounce all temporal goods for God's sake, but retain the dominion and property thereof in common, and as to what relates to the body of which they are members, having one common stock out of which all their wants are supplied, according to the need of each one, after the example of the first Christians, of whom the Acts of the Apostles make mention in these words : ' And all they that believed, were together, and had all things common. Their possessions and goods they sold, and divided them to all, according as every one had need ' (Acts ii. 44). And again : ' Neither was there any one needy among them. For as many as were owners of lands or houses sold them, and brought the price of the things they sold and laid it down before the feet of the apostles. And distribution was made to every one according as he had need ' (Acts iv. 34). And this is the poverty of all those Religious Orders that now-a-days possess anything in common ; whose first founders, in imitation of those Christians of the primitive times, have introduced and caused to revive again in the Church this second degree of abdication ; obliging their followers to a personal renunciation of all temporal goods, retaining the property thereof in common, or in the body of their Orders. Which, though it be meritorious and holy, and withdraws in part those that embrace these institutes from the care and solicitude of worldly goods, yet as to the common, they are still entangled with them, and exposed to all those disquiets and dangers which attend earthly possessions.

“The third and most perfect degree is that of Christ and His apostles, which we Friars Minor make profession of. And it differs from the former principally in three things—first, that this community of primitive Christians did not properly abandon and give away from themselves what they possessed, but only transferred the dominion thereof to their body. But the apostles sold all they had, and gave it to the poor, renouncing all manner of right and title thereto, without retaining any the least thing to themselves, so much as in common; second, those that incorporated themselves in this first society of Christians sold what they had, and brought their money with them, to be put into the common stock, out of which their needs were afterwards supplied by means of the said money, to which they had recourse to procure what they stood in need of. But as for the apostles all use and administration of money whatsoever was forbidden them; neither was it lawful for them so much as in their journeys to carry in their purses any coin or money, to supply their daily wants; third, the members of this first Christian community were not obliged to any strait or penurious use of things, either in clothes, victuals, or lodging; but freely enjoyed all their conveniences, without restraint. But the apostles were denied several things commodious for the use and civil life of man, as shoes or multiplicity of garments.

“Behold here all the conditions of the most sublime poverty of the Seraphic Order of St. Francis, styled therefore by a special title, and most deservedly, 'the Patriarch of the Poor of the Crucified.' From whence it is easy to gather its perfection and excellence beyond that of other religious, it being an absolute and complete renunciation of money and all things of this world, both in particular and in common, purely depending upon the providential care of the heavenly Father, and the charity of the people, for their support, in imitation of our Saviour."

To this beautiful description of Franciscan poverty by Father Weston not much need be added to complete the portrait of a Franciscan. We expect indeed to find in a true Friar Minor many other qualities; but these spring from that apostolic poverty which Francis loved so much, as from their source: they rest on it, as on their foundation. When men beheld the Franciscans travelling along the highways "two and two" and "shod with sandals" and possessing "neither silver nor gold, nor money in their purses," little wonder if there came vividly to their minds the words of our Lord in sending forth His disciples. So they waited not to hear the name of the newcomers, but with the intuitive accuracy of "Catholic instinct," proceeded themselves to give them a name: "the Order of the Holy Apostles."*

The Franciscans were popular with all classes, from the king who employed them as ghostly fathers or trusty messengers, to the poor wayfarer who received from them, with a kind word and cheerful countenance, a crust of the loaf given them by a charitable benefactor.

CHAPTER III.

BRIEF RETROSPECT.

THE rapid growth of the Seraphic Order was not to be confined to Italy. One day St. Francis, having been favoured with a vision, said: "My dear children, for your sakes I must needs tell you what I have seen, though I would rather have kept it a secret, if charity did not prompt me to speak. I saw a great multitude of men coming to us, wishing to put on our holy habit, and join in our manner of life: and the sound of their steps, guided by the command of holy obedience, is still in my ears. I saw the roads crowded with a multitude from every nation: the French come, the Spaniards hasten, the English and Teutons run, and vast numbers from other lands are approaching with all speed."

Scarcely had Blessed Agnellus* with his eight companions landed on our shores when pious souls began to flock around them, and friaries began to spring up. They were founded in the true spirit of St. Francis, as one instance, chosen from among many, will suffice to show.

The Franciscan Friary of Reading dates from the year 1233. By a deed of July 14 of that year the

* The English Franciscans keep his feast with Office and Mass on March 13, the anniversary of his death.

Benedictine abbot granted to the Friars Minor a certain piece of waste ground near the king's highway leading to Caversham bridge, with permission to build and dwell there, so long as they should continue without acquiring any property of their own. But if at any time, by any accident, or by any means, it should come to pass that the Friars Minor should have any property, or anything of their own, they agreed for themselves, and their successors for ever, that it should be lawful for the abbot and his successors by their own authority to expel them from every part of their land, without the hindrance of any contradiction or appeal.*

St. Francis had received an assurance from God that the Order would never lack holy brethren who would observe the rule in its purity. Already in the fourteenth century efforts were made to purge the Order from whatever abuses might have crept in. This movement began to spread rapidly in the fifteenth century, under the title of "Regular Observance." Its chief promoters were St. Bernardine of Siena, St. John Capistran and St. James della Marcha. Their followers were called "Observants." The movement reached England about the middle of the fifteenth century, as we learn from a letter written by St. John Capistran to King Henry VI., in which he says: "As I know your holy intention to raise new establishments to the honour of God and St. Bernardine, I have only to add that faith without works is dead. Hence, if you should build such friaries, let it not be to please me or others, but only with the object of securing for yourself as many mansions in heaven. If your Majesty for your conscience sake should erect houses of the Observance, I shall write to the Father Vicar of France and the nearest Guardian, who will give you every assistance.

“Dated October 24, 1454.” *

Although we do not hear of any immediate step being taken by the king, the Regular Observance must have obtained a footing, for in 1470 the General Chapter of Palencia numbered England amongst the Provinces of the Observants.

At length about the year 1480 King Edward IV. gave the friars the Chapel of the Holy Cross at Greenwich, where later Henry VII. erected a new building for the Observants.

This new movement caused no division among the English Franciscans, for in 1498 the Provincial Chapter of the Observants, at which the Regular Observance was, by the king's command and letters, introduced at Newcastle, Canterbury and Southampton, was held at the Grey Friars in London, which was not a house of the Observants.

From a note written by Cromwell on the back of a letter dated September 13, 1532, it is evident that at that time the Regular Observance counted six friaries in England. In this note, made immediately after the Franciscan Chapter, we read :

* Fr. Francis a S. Clara, Historia minor.

Minister Father Peyton.
 Warden of Greenwich, Freer Henry Elston.
 Warden of Richmond, Freer Ryehe.
 Warden of Canterbury, Gabriel Pekoke.
 Warden of Newarke, Father Rykys.
 Warden of Newcastle, Father Baker.
 Warden of Southampton, Father Scryvener.

It may be safely assumed that in this note the names of all the houses of the Regular Observance are mentioned.*

The chapter had been held at Richmond, for we find, September 26, 1532, a "Warrant under the sign manual to Cromwell as master of the jewels, to deliver to the Friars Observants, now at their Chapter at Richmond, to be employed as alms, £6 13s. 4d.

At the time of the Dissolution the total number of friaries belonging to the English Franciscan Province was 73. A few of these were situated in Scotland; but there was a Scotch Province besides. We give them here in alphabetical order :

Aylesbury ; Bedford ; Berwick ; Beverley ; Bodmin ; Boston ; Bridgenorth ; Bridgewater ; Bristol ; Brougham in Westmoreland ; † Bury Saint Edmunds ; Cambridge ; Canterbury ; Cardiff ; Carlisle ; Carmarthen ; Chester ; Chichester ; Colchester ; Coventry ; Doncaster ; Dorchester in Dorsetshire ; Dumfries ; Dundee ; Dunwich ; Exeter ; Gloucester ; Grantham ; Greenwich ; Grimsby ; Haddington ; Hartlepool ; Hereford ; Ipswich ; Lancaster ; Leicester ; Lewes in Sussex ; Lichfield ; * Chapuis speaks of seven houses of the Observants, but does not mention their names. Cf. Calendar of State Papers, Henry VIII., vii. 1057. † Leland's Itinerary.

Lincoln; Llanfaes near Beaumaris; London; Ludlow; Lynn; Maidstone; Newark; Newcastle; Northampton; Norwich; Nottingham; Oxford; Penrith; Plymouth; Pontefract; Preston; Reading; Richmond in Surrey; Richmond in Yorkshire; Roxburgh; Salisbury; Scarborough; Shrewsbury; Southampton; Stafford; Stamford; Stoke-under-Ham in Somersetshire; Walsingham; Ware; Winchelsea; Winchester; Worcester; Yarmouth; York.

To these must be added Becmachen or Bewmaken, in Kirk Harberry parish, Isle of Man, founded in 1373.*

The Scottish Province, according to Gonzaga,† counted at that time nine houses: Aberdeen; Ayr; Edinburgh; Elgin; Glasgow; Jedburg; Perth; St. Andrews; Stirling. They had all adopted the Regular Observance in the year 1517.

The English Franciscans have left us noble examples of fortitude in days of danger and persecution.

About the year 1534 Fathers Peto and Elstow, having preached against the divorce at Greenwich, were brought before the Privy Council, and reprimanded there. The Earl of Essex told them they deserved to be put into a sack and thrown into the Thames. The reply was: "My Lord, be pleased to frighten your court-epicures with such sentences: such threats make no impression upon us. And as for your Thames, the road to heaven lies as near by water as by land."

In the same year, on April 20, Father Hugh Rich and Richard Risby suffered martyrdom, together with Elizabeth Barton, two Benedictines and two secular priests.

In 1537 the Venerable Fathers Anthony Brookby, Thomas Cort and Thomas Belchiam laid down their lives for the Faith.

Four Franciscans, Thomas Packington, Bonaventure Roe, John Tuit and Richard Carter, who had been cast into prison, were set free in 1537. But they had suffered such hardships in their confinement that they died soon after their release.

On May 22, 1538, Blessed John Forest was burnt in Smithfield.

In the same year, August 9, Father Anthony Browne was burnt at Norwich.

In that year also thirty-two Franciscans died in prison in various parts of the country.

On July 8, 1539, the Venerable Father John Waire, or Maire,* was executed at St. Thomas' Waterings, together with the vicar of Wandsworth, his curate and his servant.

Some of the Observants made good their escape into Belgium and other parts of the Continent. A few fled to the south of Ireland, and were hospitably received by the people of Kinsale.

With Mary's accession came a short respite. The surviving Observants began to re-assemble at Greenwich in 1553. The queen restored their friary and church, which was solemnly reopened in 1555. Among those who received the Franciscan habit in those days was Father Thomas Bourchier, the well-known author of the work De Martyrio Fratrum Minorum, printed at Ingolstadt in 1583.

* I hope that this will meet the eye of those who wish to mention this venerable martyr's name, and that we shall not hear again of N. Waire, or Francis Waire, or Nicholas Waire.

Later, in 1634, when the Franciscans assembled in chapter at Greenwich, they chronicled that the conventual buildings still existed in a perfectly regular form, with the church, cloisters, dormitory and community rooms, and a large garden.

In 1559 Queen Elizabeth utterly suppressed and expelled the Franciscans. Some again took the road into exile, others hid themselves and remained at home in seclusion and oblivion.

Among this remnant of the Order, three names stand prominent, and are deserving of more than a bare mention.

Father John Gray, a Scotch Franciscan, born of a noble family, some say English, others Scotch, after his expulsion went to the house of his Order at Brussels, where he was kindly received and lived in great repute for sanctity. But at length the Geuzian heretics broke into the church; and as Father Gray was kneeling in prayer before the high altar, they inflicted mortal wounds upon him. He said, "Lord, forgive them, and receive my soul;" and so expired on June 5, 1579. The Catholics afterwards came to the friary to see the body; and one of them who was suffering from an incurable disease, kissing a cloth dipped in the martyr's blood, was instantly cured.

Father Lawrence Collier was arrested for his religion, and thrown into prison, where he died after two years' confinement. This occurred probably at Stafford, in 1590.

Venerable John Buckley, alias Jones, was a secular priest, and lay confined in Wisbeach Castle in 1587. After that he either escaped or was released. He then went abroad, and was received into the Order of St. Francis, probably at Pontoise. Returning to England in 1593, he laboured for three years with great fruit, and then fell again into the hands of the persecutors. He was hanged, drawn and quartered at St. Thomas' Waterings on July 12, 1598. It was he who handed the seal of the English Province to Father William Staney.

Among the other surviving Franciscans of this period were the following: Father Thomas Ackrick, who was a prisoner in Hull Castle in the year 1583; Father Henry More, a relative of Blessed Thomas More, who received the habit abroad on September 22, 1584; Father Thomas Langton; Father George Dennis, who died in the friary of the Order at Liège in 1585; Father Thomas Bouchier, who died at Ara-Coeli, Rome, in 1586; Father Stephen Fox, who died at Lisbon in 1588; Father John, commonly known as "the Old Beggar," who died at Leyland about the year 1590; Father John Richel, who died at the Franciscan friary, Louvain, in 1599; Father Richard, who died in Spain in 1619; Father Nelson, who died in 1628 in England, where he had remained hidden all his life.

But not the least remarkable among the few scattered English Franciscans was Father William Staney, or Stanney, who forms as it were the connecting link between the first and the second Province. He was made the first Commissary of his English brethren since the suppression, as the continuator of Wadding says, in 1601. It was he who admitted Father John Gennings to the Order, and afterwards gave him the seal of the English Province. He was the author of a treatise "On the Third Order of St. Francis, commonly called the Order of Penance, for the use of those who desire to lead a holy life, and do penance in their own houses." It was printed at Douai in 1617. *

We do not hear much of him subsequently, probably because he acted independently of the other English Franciscans. But it is recorded that in 1620 he summoned a nun of the Third Order, Petronilla Kemp, from Brussels to England. Shortly afterwards she returned to Brussels with one postulant, and, visiting her native country again the following year, she brought six more.

After this year no further mention occurs of Father Staney. It must only be added that in the annals of the Order he is praised for his integrity and holiness of life.

* The continuator of Wadding says at Mechlin, but this is a mistake; the work does not appear to have passed through more than one edition.

CHAPTER IV.

FATHER JOHN GENNINGS AND HIS PIOUS PROJECT.

EDMUND GENNINGS, a convert to the Catholic faith, having been ordained priest at Soissons in 1590, returned to England to labour on the mission. He went to Lichfield, his native town; but found that most of his friends and kindred were dead, except one brother, who, he heard, was in London, but in what part of the town he could not learn. Understanding that the state of his soul at that time was very bad, his charity determined him to go up to London to seek after this stray sheep. For a whole month he left no place untried where he could suspect his brother might be; but still not finding him, and having now no hopes of meeting with him, he resolved to leave the town for a time. Then, however, God Almighty unexpectedly brought him to the sight of his brother, though at first without knowing him, and that in a strange manner, as Father John Gennings relates in his life.

“ Having, as I have said, a determination to leave London for a while, he walked forth of his inn one morning, a few days before he proposed to travel, to visit a friend on the other side of the city; and passing by St. Paul’s Church, when he was on the east side thereof, he suddenly felt a strange sensation in his body, so much that his face glowed, and, as he thought, his hair stood on end; and all his joints trembling for fear, his whole body seemed to be bathed in a cold sweat.

"This strange accident causing him to fear some evil to threaten him, or danger of being taken up, he looked back to see if he could perceive any one pursuing him; but seeing nobody near, but only a youth in a brown-coloured cloak, making no reflection who it should be, he went forward to his intended place to say Mass that day.

"Not long after, on the very morning he proposed to depart out of the town, the blessed man, recollecting himself in his devotions, earnestly prayed that his departure without finding his desired brother might increase his patience; and though it afflicted him very much, yet he cried out, 'Fiat, voluntas tua! My will is Thy will; sweet Lord, Thy will be done!' His devotions being finished, he went abroad to another place where he had promised to celebrate Mass before his departure. Which done, as he was returning homewards towards his inn upon Ludgate Hill, suddenly he felt the same sensations as he had done before; his joints trembled as dreading some great trouble or misfortune to ensue; and as the lamb naturally fears the ravening wolves, so his innocence fearing the malice of his persecutors, he looked back to see who followed him. And behold, no man of mark, only a youth in a brown cloak. At the same instant, reflecting on the time past, when he had suffered the like agitation, and steadfastly looking at the young man (he had left his brother a little boy in the the country, and had not seen him for eight or nine years), presently he was struck with the thought, 'This may be my brother.'

"Upon this he approached the youth, and courteously saluting him, he inquired what countryman he was; and hearing that he was a Staffordshire man, civilly demanded his name. The stranger made answer that his name was Gennings; by which he knew him certainly to be his brother, so long sought after. Then casting his eyes towards heaven, by way of love and thanks, smiling upon the party, he told him he was his kinsman, and was called 'Ironmonger,' which was the name he had assumed on his return to England, and that he was very glad to see him well; and thus they walked down Ludgate Hill, he questioning of all his friends, and asked him what had become of his brother Edmund.

"The youth not suspecting him to be the man, told him he had heard that he had gone to Rome to the Pope, and was become a notable Papist, and a traitor both to God and his country; and that if he did return, he would infallibly be hanged.

"Our sweet martyr, hearing this, and smiling at the boy's folly, told him that he had heard his brother was a very honest man, and loved both the queen and his country, but God above all. 'But tell me,' said he, 'good cousin John, do you not know him if you see him?' To which John answered, 'No;' but beginning to suspect that he was his brother, and a priest, told him he could not tell him where he was; that he greatly feared he had a brother a Papist priest, and that he was the man; swearing withal that, if it was so, he would discredit himself and all his friends, and protesting that in this he would never follow him, although in other matters he would greatly respect him; which words Edmund hearing, could no longer conceal himself from his brother, but told him truly he was his brother indeed, and for his love had taken great pains to seek him, and begged of him to keep secret the knowledge of his arrival.

"To which the youth answered, he would not for a world disclose his return; but yet he desired him to come no more unto him, for that he feared greatly the danger of the law, and to incur the penalty of the new-made statute in concealing him. The good man, hearing this, thought it neither time nor place convenient (being then in a tavern) to talk of religion. They had, however, much conversation about divers things, by which he well perceived his poor brother to be far from any good affection towards the Catholic religion, but rather wilfully given to persist in Protestantism, without any hope of a present recovery; and therefore declaring unto him his intended departure out of town, took his leave, assuring him that, within one month or little more, he intended to return, at which time he would see him again, and confer with him more at large about some necessary affairs which concerned him very much. And thus the two brothers parted, the one to his function of converting souls, the other to meditate how to corrupt his own; the one to spend his time in studying how to persuade, the other how to withstand; the one purposed to make haste back again, hoping to save a soul, brotherly love thereunto provoking him; the other wishing his brother never to return, through fear of being converted, licentious liberty perverting in him brotherly love."

The conversion of John Gennings was not to be brought about by discussion: it was to be the fruit of his brother's death, which, after labouring for some time in preaching, catechising, and performing other priestly functions in the country, he suffered in London on Friday, December 10, 1591.

Miraculous signs were not wanting at his martyrdom; but the most wonderful event that followed was the sudden conversion of this same brother, which he, speaking of himself in the third person, thus relates:

"This much loved brother, this John Gennings, being in London at the very time of his execution, hearing of the same, rather rejoiced than any way bewailed the untimely and bloody end of his nearest kinsman, hoping thereby to be rid of all persuasions which he suspected he should receive from him touching the Catholic Religion. But about ten days after his execution, towards night, having spent all that day in sport and jollity, being weary with play, he returned home, where to repose himself he went into a secret chamber. He was no sooner there set down, but forthwith his heart began to be heavy and his head melancholy, and he began to weigh how idly he had spent that day. Amidst these thoughts, there was presently represented to his mind a strange imagination and apprehension of the death of his brother; and amongst other things, how he had, not long before, forsaken all worldly pleasures, and, for his religion only, endured intolerable torments. Then within himself he made long discourses concerning his religion and his brother's, comparing the Catholic manner of living with his, and finding the one to embrace pain and mortification, and the other to seek pleasure; the one to live strictly, and the other licentiously; the one to fear sin, and the other to run into all kinds of sin; he was struck with exceeding terror and remorse. He wept bitterly, desiring God, after his fashion, to illuminate his understanding, that he might see and perceive the truth.

"Oh, what great joy and consolation did he feel at that instant! What reverence on the sudden did he begin to bear to the Blessed Virgin, and to the Saints of God, which before he had never scarcely so much as heard of! What strange emotions, as it were inspirations, with exceeding readiness of will to change his religion, took possession of his soul! And what a heavenly conception had he now of his dear brother's felicity! He imagined he saw him; he thought he heard him. In this ecstasy of mind, he made a vow upon the spot, as he lay prostrate on the ground, to forsake kindred and country, to find out the true knowledge of his brother's faith; which vow he soon after performed, and departed from England without giving notice to any of his friends, and went beyond the seas to execute his promise."

He became a Catholic without persuasion or conference with any one; then he was enrolled an alumnus of Douai College, where he was ordained priest in 1607, and was from thence sent upon the English mission in 1608.

It was here that in 1610 he met Father William Staney, who had been made Commissary of the English Franciscans in 1601, and had in virtue of this commission power to receive novices. This zealous missionary had been imprisoned in the Marshalsea for the faith, before the year 1599.

Father Anthony Parkinson in an unedited manuscript states that John Gennings received the habit of St. Francis in England about the year 1610; others say in 1614.* Father Staney, observing his great fervour and desire of restoring the English Franciscans, and conceiving good hopes of success from such promising beginnings, four years later delivered into his hands the seal of the province, which he had held for some years, having received it from Venerable Father Jones, or Buckley, the martyr.

This seal, which bears the inscription, Sigillum Provinciae Angliæ Fratrum Minorum Regularis Observantiae, may date from about the year 1500, when the Observance began to flourish here. Father Gonzaga appears to have been unable to find it; for in his work, edited in 1587, the space allotted to it in the collection of seals is blank, as well as that intended for the seal of the Scotch Province. But he accurately describes the English seal in these words:

* It does not appear quite certain in what year Father Gennings joined the Franciscan Order. The dates given in his mortuary bill and his epitaph do not agree.

"It represents our Blessed Lady with the Child Jesus in her arms, having the moon under her feet; beneath is the coat of arms of the kingdom."

It is now kept at Forest Gate.

Of the Scotch seal there is an impression extant, carefully preserved as a precious relic, at the Franciscan Friary, Glasgow. It is inscribed: Sigillum Ministri Provincialis Fratrum Minorum Regularis Observantiae Provinciae Scotiae, and represents St. Bernardine with the monogram of the Holy Name in his hand.

After his admission Father Gennings went for a time to the friary of Ypres in Flanders, there to be trained in the Franciscan manner of life, and to make himself thoroughly familiar with the rule and constitution of the Order. It was in this religious establishment also that some of his first companions received the habit.

We shall give the sequel of this history from the unpublished manuscript of Father Parkinson.

Father John Gennings, understanding that some of the priests and students of the English College at Douai were much affected to the Order of St. Francis, conceived that it was possible to restore the Province of England, which in former times had been famous throughout the whole Christian world for both virtue and learning. With this view he addressed himself to Father Andrew a Soto, Commissary General of the Order on this side the Alps, from whom he obtained the admission of some priests and other students of the said seminary; and then for the present procured a residence of nine religious, six fathers and three novices, at Gravelines, where, as Father Angelus Mason says, the first fathers of Douai made their religious profession.

Some also of those who were received into the Order for the Province of England, by the Commissary General Andrew a Soto, were by the same authority admitted to make their noviceship in the Franciscan friary at Ypres; amongst which number was Christopher Davenport, alias Francis a Sancta Clara, who with two others was there clothed on October 7, 1617.

CHAPTER V.

DOUAI.

PERCEIVING his pious design in a hopeful way, Father Gennings proposed to himself the getting of a fixed settlement for his friars in the town and university of Douai. He set to work with great foresight and prudence, and prevailed with one Father William Thompson, a doctor of laws and Franciscan Conventual, to go as his agent and procurator to Spain, to the General Chapter of the Observant Franciscans, held at Salamanca in 1618; and there he so effectually represented the pious wishes of Father Gennings that he obtained letters patent from Father Benignus of Genoa, Minister General of the whole Order, and from his Definitory, not only for the carrying on of the work of the restoration of the English Franciscan Province, but also to give authority for its first settlement in the university town of Douai. In order to enforce this concession of the General of the Order and his Definitors, a grant was likewise procured from the king of Spain himself for the said settlement, provided the Archduchess of the Low Countries and the magistrates of Douai consented.

About the same time the English Poor Clares of Gravelines had petitioned to be transferred from the jurisdiction of the Bishop of St. Omers to that of the English Franciscans. Leave was granted them by the same letters of the General, which we take from the authentic records.

BROTHER BENIGNUS OF GENOA,

Minister General and Servant of the whole Order of Friars Minor, and the Definitors of the Family this side of the Alps.

We have thought well to receive, and we accept the place intended for a seminary, for our brethren of the English nation, in the university town of Douai, to begin the restoration of the English Province, formerly famous among us. And we approve and confirm the conditions upon which our Commissary General of the Belgian provinces, the Very Reverend Father Andrew a Soto, has thereto obtained permission from the said town. And we grant to that place, to its superior and brethren, the same graces, privileges, immunities and exemptions which the other houses and colleges of our Order enjoy.

Moreover, for the comfort of our noble and devout daughters, the Poor Clares of the Convent of Grave-lines, of the same English nation, in the province of Flanders, of whose piety, austere life, and zeal for the restoration of our Order in the said kingdom we have been informed, we grant that their vicar, or confessor, shall have the jurisdiction of a Guardian over the the brethren living there, whose number may be nine or ten, and among whom three or four may be novices, so as to facilitate the beginning of the restoration of this once celebrated Province. And we doubt not, from the information we have received, that the friends, parents and benefactors of the said sisters will sufficiently provide for the support of the brethren. We desire that the place be not called a convent, but a vicariate of nuns. Further, in order to ensure the efficacy of these Letters, it is our will that all the English and Scotch fathers who are in Belgium, England and Scotland, shall be subject to our Commissary General of the Belgian nation, Father Andrew a Soto, who may call to him any of the English or Scotch fathers whom he may think suitable for the English Province, in whatever place or office they may be engaged.

To the same Commissary also we give power to dispose and ordain what he thinks proper for the dress and life of Tertiaries, with the advice of our English and Scotch brethren, who will suggest what they think expedient in the present state of the country, and the danger of Catholics among heretics.

We recommend our English and Scotch brethren to the said Commissary and to all the ministers and prelates of our Belgian provinces, beseeching them to favour and promote the restoration of the English Province. And if any English or Scotch youths present themselves, to charitably admit them to the holy habit, and piously educate them.

Given at Salamanca, in the friary of our Holy Father St. Francis, at the General Chapter, June 8, 1618.

F. BENIGNUS, of Genoa, Minister General.

F. JOHN VENIDO, Commissary General.

F. DIDACUS A BARRASA, Definitor General.

F. JOSEPH BERGAIGNE, Definitor General.

F. FUANTIN SHINO, Commissary of Rome.

F. FRANCIS LE RUE, Definitor General.

F. BONAVENTURE DE MON ROY, Definitor General.

F. JOHN CLERQ, Definitor General.

F. HENRY SEDULIUS, Definitor General.

Being thus encouraged, Father Gennings addressed himself to their Highnesses Albert and Isabella, then Governors of the Spanish Netherlands; and by the intervention of Father Andrew a Soto, who was not only commissary general of the Order in those provinces, but also confessor to the Archduchess Isabella, a free and full consent was obtained. Then Father Gennings made his application to the authorities of the town and university of Douai, who with great charity and humanity granted his request, the magistrates giving him in addition a piece of waste ground in the town, whereon to build a friary and college.

Thereupon the zealous founder began to collect alms in England, chiefly in his own part of the country. Among the benefactors were the Countess of Castlehaven, Sir William, a citizen of London, and many noblemen; and in Flanders Philip Gavarel, Benedictine Abbot of St. Vedast, and John Jonquay, Abbot of Marchienne of the same Order. Many hands were soon at work in constructing a suitable building for the Friars; and in the meantime a charitable townsman of Douai lent them a private house to dwell in, till they could take possession of the new friary.

In this same year, 1618, on October 30, the English Franciscans first assembled at Douai in community, under the presidency of Father Bonaventure Jackson, who had been called thither by the commissary from the friary of Malines or Mechlin, in Belgium, and was made the first Preses. He was appointed to this post by the following letter.

BROTHER ANDREW A SOTO,

Commissary General of the Order of Friars Minor of the Regular Observance, with fulness of power over the Provinces of Belgium, Britain, Strasburg, Cologne, and Scotland, to the Reverend Father Bonaventure Jackson, Priest and Confessor of the same Order, eternal salvation in the Lord.

Whereas, with the consent of our Most Serene Governors, of the Bishop of Arras, and of the Magistrates of Douai, we have lately obtained a place for a College in that town for our English Fathers; and this foundation has been approved by the Most Reverend Father General with his Definitors at the General Chapter held last year at Salamanca, upon the conditions required by the said Magistrates; and the said General has granted to this place, and to the superior and brethren, all the graces, privileges, immunities and exemptions which the other Houses and Colleges of our Order enjoy.

Hence we, knowing both by our own experience and the testimony of the other brethren, thy edifying life and zeal for Holy Religion, and trusting in thy prudence and ability to give an impulse to this pious undertaking; we appoint thee Preses of the friary to be founded in the said town of Douai, with all the authority belonging to the superiors of our Houses And in virtue of Holy Obedience we command all the Fathers and Brothers, who shall be sent to that place, to revere and obey thee as their legitimate superior.

Farewell in the Lord, and pray for us.

FR. ANDREW A SOTO, Commissary General.

The first members of this community were, according to the Annals,* Fathers Anthony Clercke and Francis Davenport. About the month of December they were joined by Jerome Pickford, a learned priest, and George Perrot. Father John Jennings was also a member of this religious family. Before the end of the following year Fathers Nicholas Day and Francis Bel were called hither out of Spain, from whence Father John Bullaker afterwards also came.

The English Franciscans, as Father Parkinson continues, in their first poor house at Douai had not as yet the convenience of teaching; and therefore such of them as had not finished their higher studies, went daily to school to St. Vedast's College, particularly Francis Bel, who, having studied Divinity for only two years, went with others to the lessons of the English monks, Reverend Fathers Rudisind Barlo, and Leander Jones, Doctors of Divinity, and Thomas Torquatus Latham, by whom they were carefully and charitably taught, until such time as their little college at Douai was habitable.

The long-desired time came at last; and in 1621 the English Franciscans removed from the borrowed private house to their new Friary of St. Bonaventure. Here Father Francis Davenport immediately opened schools, and was the first professor that taught the brethren in this place, from whence, in due time came out many learned Franciscans.

The community continued to be governed by a Preses until the year 1624, when it was made a Guardianate by the Commissary General, who, at the same time, appointed Father Bonaventure Jackson the first Guardian. But he, being wanted in England, was called thither the same year, and Father Francis Davenport was appointed to succeed him in that office.

The following year, Father Francis Davenport was sent by Father John Gennings to Rome, to the General Chapter of the Order, to solicit there a further enhancement of the English Province. And this he effected by procuring letters patent from Father Bernardine de Senis, Minister General of the Order, who, with the consent of the whole chapter, restored to it its ancient rights and privileges of a Province, and appointed Father John Gennings Custos, until such time as the number of brethren would be sufficiently increased to have a Provincial. In the meantime, he granted him the right of voting in the General Chapters of the Order, and of having both an active and passive voice in all elections of that venerable assembly.

For the text of this document the Annals refer us to the "Certamen," where we read as follows :

BROTHER BERNARDINE DE SENIS,

Minister General and Servant of the whole Order of Friars Minor, to our beloved Brother in Christ, Father John Gennings, Vicar of England, greeting.

By our authority, and with the consent of the general Definitory, held at the general Chapter in Rome in the year of the great Jubilee, 1625, our Province of England has been restored, and all the privileges enjoyed by other Provinces of the Order have been granted it, with this only restriction—that until such time as the number of brethren shall have increased, the Superior shall not be called Provincial, but Custos: he shall, however, have the full power of a Provincial, with the right of sitting in the General Chapters, where he shall have both an active and passive vote, like other Provincials.

We therefore, by virtue of our office, institute and declare thee by these our letters Custos of the said Province.

Given at Ara-coeli, Rome, May 27, 1625.

Having thus far followed the successful course of the English Franciscans, it will not be amiss to cast a glance at the doings of their Scotch brethren.

CHAPTER VI.

EFFORTS TO RESTORE THE SCOTCH PROVINCE.

AT the sight of the success which crowned every move of their English brethren, the Scotch Franciscans felt desirous of obtaining a footing in the same university-town of Douai. They set to work with a good will, and before long a pious friend and benefactor turned up in the person of the parish priest of Marny, or Masny.

This venerable ecclesiastic gave them three houses in the town for a foundation in the year 1624; and Father Jackson, then Guardian of the English Franciscans, was requested by the Commissary General, Andrew a Soto, to see that the kind gift was accepted by our Syndic according to the benefactor's intention. The following is a translation of the letter which the Commissary wrote to Father Jackson.

BROTHER ANDREW A SOTO,

*Of the Order of Friars Minor of the Regular Observance, Commissary General with plenitude of power, to the Reverend Father Bonaventure Jackson, priest, of the Province of England, and Guardian of the college of English Franciscans at Douai, greet-

Whereas Anthony Chemin, the worthy parish priest of Masny, has, from pure charity and the desire of assisting the Scotch Franciscans, given them three houses with gardens and outhouses, on certain conditions: we, gratefully accepting the gift, upon the same conditions, command thy Paternity with the merit of holy obedience, to see that the aforesaid houses be accepted by the Syndic of thy friary, in witness of which we have given these letters, signed with our hand and sealed with the greater seal of our office, at Brussels, this 30th of August, 1624.

BROTHER ANDREW A SOTO, Commissary General.

But after mature consideration the Scotch fathers did not find it possible to comply with the conditions laid down by the magistrates of Douai as to sufficient means of support. The negotiations broke down, and the houses, as it appears, reverted to the former owner.

A few years later, in 1632, Father Bel, who had then finished but half the term of his office of guardian at Douai, to which he had been appointed in 1630, was sent to Scotland as first provincial of the Scotch province, which he was called upon to restore. This step was taken in consequence of a resolution recently passed by the General Chapter of the Order held in Spain. It was certainly not Father Bel's fault that his efforts were not crowned with success. But the time was not opportune for the restoration of the Order in Scotland, and after a few years stay there, Father Bel returned to England. He was back before the middle of June, 1637, for he was then made Titular Guardian of London.*

* In November 1635, Father Cornelius Ward, O.S.F. (an Irish

In the year 1687, in consequence of the zeal of a Scotch Franciscan, Father Francis Macdonnell, for the spread of the Order in that country, a fresh effort was made for the restoration of the ancient province of Scotland. He addressed himself to the ecclesiastical authorities in Rome on the subject. But before coming to a decision, the general of the Order desired to have the opinion of the English provincial, to whom he sent the following letter.

TO THE VERY REVEREND FATHER PROVINCIAL OF ENGLAND.

Father Francis Macdonnell, who has for many years been Prefect of the missions in Scotland, and has rendered himself very deserving in that capacity, has lately been sent back thither by order of His Britannic Majesty. It now appears agreeable to the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda that for the good of religion he should restore our Province there, with the assistance of some of our brethren; that for this object more authority should be granted him than he had before; that he should have the title of Provincial of Scotland, with power of receiving brethren, founding houses, and act as Provincial Minister. But in order to proceed with due caution in this matter, I have thought it well first to consult your Paternity; and I desire that, putting aside all prejudice (Franciscan) arrived as Prefect (of Scotland); and on his retirement from the Scottish Mission in 1640, he was succeeded by Father Patrick Hogarty, O.S.F., who, after five years imprisonment, was forced to return to Ireland, in August, 1648.—Catholic Directory.

and private interests, you should tell me zealously, fraternally and confidentially what you think best for the service of God, the good of the Church, and the spread of the Faith in England, under the government of the pious King whom heaven has granted us. Pray to God for these intentions and farewell.

Given at Rome, April 12, 1687.

Of your Paternity the devoted servant in the Lord,

BR. PETER MARINUS, Minister General.

The Provincial, Father John Cross, sent the following reply.

MOST REVEREND FATHER GENERAL,

It is only now that I have, with due humility, obedience and joy, received your Paternity's kind letter, dated Rome, April 12. For I have just returned from the visitation of the northern and eastern parts of the country, North and South Wales, and the neighbouring counties in this your Province of England. In this work I have spent several months, erecting public chapels, and appointing missionaries and rectors for them, for the exercise of religion and the increase of our Seraphic Order in this kingdom. I have been encouraged by the special devotion and kindness of our most pious king, whose only desire is that, with the help of zealous labourers, our Holy Faith may spread, and strike deep root in every part of his dominions. I have still to visit the western parts of the Province, then our places across the sea in Belgium, before the celebration of our intermediary Chapter in London, about the middle of September. Then I shall begin to prepare for my departure to the General Chapter, where, at your Paternity's feet, I shall explain at greater length and to our common joy the progress of the Catholic Religion and of our Province in England. I shall then also repeat the prayer of our brethren that this ancient and once famous Province may be restored to its former place in the Order, from which it has long since been removed for no other reason than its fidelity to the Holy See, and the part it took in defending the matrimonial rights of Catherine of Aragon against Henry VIII. For as this king and his daughter Elizabeth slew the brethren and suppressed their houses, the Province became extinct; nor had it an advocate to defend its rights at the General Chapters, either among its own fathers or elsewhere, until the restoration of the Province in the beginning of this century.*

With regard to the subject of your Paternity's letter, I beg to say that I well know the Reverend Father Francis Macdonnell. He is a prudent, peaceful and zealous man; and, under the protection of the illustrious Baron Macdonnell, he has worked for many years, together with two companions, for the spread and preservation of the Catholic faith. But his two assistants having died, and he being taken ill, and deprived of all help, was forced to discontinue the undertaking. He is, however, willing to resume his duties, under the protection of our most pious Sovereign. Thus it is evident that he well deserves the esteem and favour of the Sacred Congregation and of your Paternity.

Now I shall state my mind plainly and with all submission concerning the erection or restoration of the Scotch Province. In order to satisfy the wishes of the Sacred Congregation, and to promote the welfare of the new Province, we should safeguard the rights of the English Province, from which it would depend and obtain assistance in its beginnings, as well on account of the proximity and union of the districts, as because the King's Majesty resides in the capital of Great Britain. Hence Scotland was formerly as it were dependent on the English Province, having been founded and governed by the English fathers, as appears from the records of the Order and the Province. And although it was afterwards erected into a separate Province, it nevertheless frequently had Provincial Ministers from England. There was also the Custody of Newcastle, one of the seven old Custodies of England, which possessed several friaries in Scotland, until the extinction of the English Province. Under the pious, martyred Queen Mary, great-grandmother of our King, the Scotch Province survived for a few years, and tried with other rival Provinces to supplant us in the order of precedence.

I wish to point out with all deference that, in order to safeguard our rights, it would be better to erect Scotland first into a Custody annexed to the English Province, from which it could obtain helpers ; and Father Macdonnell might be appointed Custos. We could also by this means exclude restless spirits, who will not fail to turn up and impede the good work, as I already foresee. Let us first have a sufficient number of members and houses, and then erect a Province not in name only, but in deed. I am convinced that this would also be more in accordance with the political views of our pious Sovereign.

For my own part, I promise Father Macdonnell every assistance and friendship, if your Paternity should appoint him Custos for Scotland. And, provided the rights of our English Province be respected and restored, let your Paternity in wisdom and piety do what seems best.

May the most merciful God long preserve your Paternity for the good of our Order and of this Province.

Your most obedient son and servant in Christ,

BR. JOHN CROSS,

Provincial Minister of England.

London, June 3, 1687.

The English Provincial had, no doubt, taken a practical view of the matter, and it was well that his counsel prevailed.

Although no further attempt was made for the restoration of the Scotch Province, some of the English Franciscans were occasionally sent to labour there. Thus we find Fathers Peter Gordon and Clement Hyslop on the mission in Scotland in the beginning of the eighteenth century.

CHAPTER VII.

FOUNDATION OF CONVENTS OF THE SECOND AND THIRD ORDER. FORMAL ERECTION OF THE ENGLISH PROVINCK.

WHILST devoting his attention and energy to the consolidation of the English Province of Friars Minor, Father Gennings had not forgotten the interests of those of the other sex who might be called to a life of greater perfection under the Rule of St. Francis. With the co-operation of other superiors, he succeeded in establishing two convents of English nuns, one of the Second, the other of the Third Order.

Already towards the end of the sixteenth century some English ladies had been admitted among the Poor Clares at St. Omers. In 1607 they settled at Gravelines, and from this place a colony went out in 1627 to make a new foundation. The following year they settled in the town of Aire, and flourished there under the jurisdiction and patronage of the English Franciscans until the French Revolution. The sisters then came to England, where they first settled at Britwell, Nettlebed, Oxon, and later, in 1813, at Coxside near Plymouth. Eleven of the nuns died there, and the community rapidly dwindled. In 1834 two of the sisters joined the community at Scorton (now at Darlington). The remaining sisters went to Gravelines to help in bringing back better times to the dying mother house. Finding their efforts useless after two years, they returned to England and joined the community at Scorton in 1836. Thus ended the Aire foundation.

The foundation of the English Convent of the Third Order was started in 1619 at Brussels, where two English ladies received the habit in the Church of the Friars Minor. They were soon joined by six others, and in 1626 they had increased to thirty-four, whilst more continued to arrive. After sixteen years' residence at Brussels they removed to Nieuport, from whence a colony went afterwards to Paris. In the year 1662 the nuns finally settled at Bruges, where they remained until the storm of the French Revolution forced them to seek shelter in their native country. They were eleven years at Winchester, but removed in 1805 to Taunton.

After this brief reference to the convents of nuns, we resume our narrative in the words of Father Parkinson.

"The English Franciscans being now sufficiently numerous, and having a noviceship and schools of both philosophy and divinity, and also two convents of nuns under their obedience and direction, their case was again represented to the General of the Order Father Bernardine de Senis, who, at the instance of the said friars and of several of their chief patrons in England, did enforce the decree of the General Chapter held at Rome in 1625, in pursuance whereof he constituted and declared them a Province of the Order, and restored to them their ancient place and privileges by letters patent, whereby Father John Gennings, hitherto Custos, was constituted Provincial, Father Francis a S. Clara Davenport Custos, and Fathers Bonaventure Jackson, Nicholas Day, Francis Bel and Jerome Pickford Definitors." Thus far Father Parkinson. The charge of expediting and concluding this business was committed to Fathers Joseph Bergaigne, then Commissary General for the northern parts of Europe, who afterwards became Archbishop of Cambrai.

This official signified to Father Bel, in his letter dated Brussels, September 24, 1630, that he had just returned from Ratisbon, and found the letters of the Minister General awaiting him; that he had been directed to summon the above-said Father Provincial, Custos and Definitors, as also the six senior Fathers in England, to assemble at Douai on the first Sunday of Advent; that there and then he might declare the wishes of the General, and make all necessary arrangements in that Provincial Chapter. Circumstances, however, intervened which induced the Commissary to alter the place of meeting; and on November 12, following he addressed another letter from Alost to Father Bel, in which he stated his belief that very few could attend from England, and that he anticipated no great inconvenience would result to the nuns of St. Elizabeth if the first Chapter were celebrated in their Convent at Brussels, instead of meeting at Douai, on the first Sunday of Advent. And he begged Father Bel, the director of those nuns, to despatch immediately intelligence of this altered arrangement to those whom it might concern.

On November 24 Fathers Gennings and Davenport arrived at Brussels ; Father Heath joined them on the 29th. On the day appointed the Chapter was opened in due form, and the following decree of the General was published.

BROTHER BERNARDINE DE SENIS,

Minister General and Servant of the whole Order of our Seraphic Father St. Francis, to our beloved Fathers and Brothers of the English Province, health and peace in the Lord.

Whereas at the last General Chapter of the whole Order, celebrated in Rome in the year 1625, the Province of England, which had become extinct through the persecution of heretics, was restored to its former rank and place, with this only restriction that it should be called a Custody until the number of brethren should have sufficiently increased: now, understanding that it continues to flourish more and more, that it possesses a novitiate and schools of Philosophy and Theology, and that the Religious are becoming more numerous ; having moreover been requested to restore the Province more fully by giving it a Provincial and Definitors, and this not only by our fathers but also by leading Catholics, who know the state of affairs in England, and the good which may result from this step: hence we have resolved to give the English Province a regular existence, as we do by virtue of this decree, and we institute the Very Reverend Father John Gennings, heretofore Custos, Provincial Minister ; we appoint the Very Reverend Father Francis a S. Clara Custos, and the Very Reverend Fathers Bonaventure Jackson, Nicholas Day, Francis Bel and Jerome Pickford Definitors, granting them at the same time all the faculties, rights and privileges which by our Rule and Constitutions belong to the Provincial, Custos and Definitors of the Province. And in order that these appointments may speedily come to the knowledge of the Fathers and Brothers of the said Province, we charge the Very Reverend Father Joseph Bergaigne, Commissary General over the Provinces of Belgium and Great Britain, to promulgate them as soon as possible, and to do all he deems expedient, according to God, for the welfare and increase of the English Province.

Minister General.

It will be interesting to our readers to see the document relating to this first Chapter meeting, wherein we are made acquainted with the offices which the fathers held in early times, and with some regulations then made.

TABLE OF THE FIRST CHAPTER OF THE ENGLISH
restored to its rights and rank by the authority of the

the Most Reverend Father Bernardine de Senis, Minister General of the whole Order of Friars Minor, held at the Convent of St. Elizabeth, of the Sisters of the Third Order of our holy Father St. Francis in the city of Brussels, on the first Sunday of Advent, 1630, under the presidency of the Very Reverend Father Joseph Bergaigne, Definitor General of the same Order, and Commissary General with fulness of power over the Provinces of Germany, Belgium, Ireland England and Scotland.

In the first place, by the authority of the Most Reverend Father General, the Very Reverend Father John Gennings, for many years Vicar and Custos, is instituted and declared Provincial.

Custos, the Very Reverend Father Francis a S. Clara, professor of theology, and for some years Guardian of the College of the English Province at Douai. Definitors: Very Reverend Father Bonaventure Jackson, formerly first Preses and Guardian of the said College at Douai; Very Reverend Father Nicholas Day, preacher and professor of theology; Very Reverend Father Francis Bel, preacher and Confessor in the said Convent of St. Elizabeth of Sisters of the Third Order; Very Reverend Father Jerome Pickford, preacher, and formerly Preses of the College at Douai.

The Very Reverend Father Francis Bel, Definitor, is instituted Guardian of the College at Douai. Vicar, Very Reverend Father Paul a S. Magdalena.

Guardian of London, Very Reverend Father

Bonaventure Jackson, Definitor. Guardian of Berkshire, Very Reverend Father George Perrot.

In St. Bonaventure's College at Douai, theology and philosophy shall be taught. Head professor of theology, Very Reverend Father Francis a S. Clara; second professor, Reverend Father William a S. Augustino. Professor of philosophy, Father Lawrence a S. Edmundo. The Very Reverend Father Guardian will teach the Hebrew language.

Confessor of the Convent of Gravelines, for the nuns who reside at Aire, Father Peter of Alcantara.

Confessor of the Convent of St. Elizabeth, of nuns of the Third Order at Brussels, Father Egidius a S. Ambrosio.

It is moreover decreed, by the authority of the Most Reverend Father General, that, for the better and easier direction of the brethren and despatch of business, the Provincial, when residing in England, may appoint a Commissary, invested with his authority, for our brethren in Belgium; and, when residing in Belgium, he may in like manner provide for England. But the said Commissary shall not have power to admit ladies to the convents of nuns, unless they provide a dower of at least three thousand florins, besides the necessary expenses for their clothing and profession. Nor shall the Commissary, when residing in Belgium, admit novices to our Order without the consent of the Discreets of Douai, which is the noviciate of the Province. Father Lawrence a S. Edmundo is appointed master of novices.

We also exhort all the fathers and brothers of the Province, in the name and by the authority of the Most Reverend Father General, that they work unanimously for the preservation and increase of the Province now restored by God's grace; and that they observe the Rule and Statutes of the Order as far as the circumstances of times, places and persecutions will allow.

Finally, leave is granted to the Very Reverend Father Provincial to admit priests of edifying life to the noviceship in England, as had already been granted heretofore by the General Chapter, and by letters patent of the Most Reverend Father Andrew a Soto of happy memory, on the feast of St. Michael the Archangel, 1620. But this must only be done for a grave reason, and after the manner agreed upon by the Commissary and some of the fathers who were present at the National Congregation held at Brussels. By the same authority he may admit sisters to their clothing and profession at Aire for the Convent of Gravelines, the Convent of Aire being now incorporated in the English Province. To this end the consent of the Provincial of Flanders has also been obtained, to whose jurisdiction the Convent was formerly subject.

SUFFRAGES.

For the Most Reverend Father General of the whole Order, by whose authority and favour this Province has been restored to its rights and rank; for His Excellency Prince Emanuel of Portugal and others who have procured and promoted by their kindness the restoration of this Province; for the prosperity of the same Province, and for the spiritual and temporal welfare of the kingdom of England, each priest shall say three Masses; the clerics three times the seven penitential psalms with the litanies; the lay brothers three hundred Our Fathers and Hail Marys.

F. JOSEPH BERGAIGNE, Commissary General.

F. JOHN GENNINGS, Provincial Minister of England.

F. FRANCIS A. S. CLARA, Custos of the Province.

F. FRANCIS BEL, Definitor.

In the name of the absent Definitors and others, who have been unable to come, on account of the dangers of the road and other obstacles, and who have excused themselves by letters addressed to the Most Reverend Father Commissary General, and have promised to concur in all that should be enacted, I have signed.

F. PETER LOMBAERTS,

Secretary to this Chapter meeting.

CHAPTER VIII.

NAMES AND OFFICES IN THE ORDER. GOVERNMENT OF THE PROVINCE.

WHEN candidates enter religion, it is customary to give them along with the habit of the Order also a new name. Among the members of the second English Franciscan Province we find some, like Francis a S. Clara, Lewis a S. Maria and others, called after two Saints. This custom must be traced to Spain, and found its way into the English Province through some of the early Fathers of the Second Province having been admitted to the Order there. In Italy the religious are called after their birthplace, as Benignus of Genoa, Bernardine de Senis. In England and Belgium the Fathers retained their surname, as John Gennings, Joseph Bergaigne. This had also been the practice before the Reformation, as we see by such names as John Forest and Henry Elston. In the second Province we also meet with peculiar names, such as Lawrence Lawrence, Masseus Massey. These names had the advantage of preventing confusion; for as at Douai the Fathers were known by their name in religion, and on the English mission by their surname, it must have been convenient if both were the same, or had a similar sound.

At the time of the formation of the second English

Province, the Franciscan Order had marvellously increased, and it was found impossible for the Minister General with his staff in Rome to efficiently govern 100,000 brethren. It had been deemed expedient to appoint a Commissary General for the north-western parts of Europe, comprising the Provinces of Germany, Belgium, and the British Isles. There were at that time four or five Provinces in Belgium and at least four in Germany. This Commissary General was dependent from the General of the Order, but had full delegated powers. The Fathers of these Provinces also assembled from time to time in Council, which was called a National Congregation of the Order, and had power to make regulations similar to that of the General Chapter, but, of course, subject to the approval of the General of the Order. The English Franciscans, like the others, sent delegates to these Congregations.

It has already been mentioned in the decree of erection that the English Franciscans had, besides the Provincial, also a Commissary for either of the two portions of the Province, England or Belgium, as the case might be, where the Provincial did not reside. His powers were regulated by the Chapter or by the General Minister.

The name of Guardian, or Warden as he was called before the Reformation, is given to the local superior of a regular House of the Order with a sufficient number of inmates. The Second English Province possessed but one such establishment, which was at Douai. This might have caused a serious inconvenience in connection with the election of the officials of the Province, in which the Guardians have a vote. But a way was found out of this difficulty by appointing titular Guardians, who should not indeed rule over a friary, but have jurisdiction over a District, with the right of voting. Two such Guardians were appointed at the first Provincial Chapter in 1630, one of London, the other of Reading or Berkshire. The District of London comprised the counties in which the city and suburbs were situated; the Reading District extended to Berkshire, Hampshire, and Sussex. This points to the fact that the missionary labours of the Franciscans at that time were limited to those parts.

Two new Districts with their respective Guardians were created in 1632: Dorset and York.

In 1634 a Guardian of Greenwich was appointed, with jurisdiction over Kent and Essex.

In 1637 it was resolved that "as some of our Fathers labour in the District of Leicester, a Guardian of Leicester be appointed." Two new Districts were formed in 1640: Oxford and Chichester. In 1647 all the Districts were re-arranged and classed in the following order:

London, comprising Middlesex, Kent, Wiltshire and Hertfordshire.

York, comprising Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, Lancashire and Rutlandshire.

Cambridge, comprising Cambridgeshire, Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Huntingdonshire and the Isle of Ely.

Bristol, comprising Somersetshire, Gloucestershire, Herefordshire, Dorsetshire, Devonshire, Cornwall and South Wales.

Newcastle, comprising Northumberland, Westmoreland, Cumberland, Durham and Richmondshire.

Worcester, comprising Worcestershire, Warwickshire, Shropshire, Cheshire, Staffordshire and North Wales.

Greenwich, to have a Guardian of its own, because it was the first house of the Regular Observance in England, and after the restoration the first Chapter in England was held there.

To these Guardianates that of Canterbury was added in 1662; then Coventry in 1668, with Warwickshire for district; finally, in 1675, at the request of Lord Henry Howard, Earl Marshal of England and Duke of Norfolk, a titular Guardian of Norwich was appointed.

The following titles of the Guardianates or Districts are given in the "Statutes for the Mission," 1713.*

Greenwich, The Most Holy Name of Jesus.†

London, Our Holy Father St. Francis.

York, St. Thomas the Martyr.

Cambridge, The Stigmata of St. Francis.

Bristol, St. Anthony of Padua.

Oxford, Blessed Agnellus.

Newcastle, St. Francis with a Cross in his hand.

Worcester, St. Bernardine.

The titular Guardians did not always reside in their respective districts. This was indeed generally the case with some, such as London, Greenwich, York and Coventry. But on the other hand we find titular Guardians living at Douai or Bruges.

* See Chapter XIII.

† This is the only Guardianate of which there is a seal: it represents the Holy Name.

However, a regulation was made in 1659 that the Guardians should visit their respective districts once a year. This was afterwards found inconvenient on account of the difficulty of travelling and the troubles of the times; and in 1692 it was considered sufficient for the Guardians to visit their subjects once during their term of office.

In order to ensure the success of the twofold object they had in view, namely, the preservation of the Faith and the conversion of England, the fathers made two wise regulations. The first was, that none should be allowed to go on the English mission unless they were judged fit for the work; the others should be employed on the continent, either at Douai, or at Aire or Bruges, in each of which places the fathers had a residence attached to the convent for two priests and two or three lay brothers. The other was, that those who did not give satisfaction on the mission could be immediately recalled; and in order to make sure of this, the missionaries had on their departure to swear before the community "that whenever they should be recalled, or sent back by their superiors, they would obey and conform to the command, circumstances notwithstanding." This oath they had to sign with their own hand.

The English Franciscans of the second Province first styled themselves "of the Regular Observance;" afterwards they assumed the name of "Recollects," and the street where their old church at Douai stands is called to this day "Rue des Récollets Anglais." They were induced to make the change chiefly by two considerations. One was that probably all the Provinces over which the Commissary General presided were termed "of Recollects;" the other that there was already an establishment of Recollects at Douai. The Franciscans had settled in that town in the thirteenth century, and had erected their friary in the Rue Notre-Dame, now called de Valenciennes. Their house and church were burned in 1553, but soon afterwards rebuilt. They had changed their old name of "Cordeliers" for that of "Recollects;" and the people, seeing that the English fathers were of the same Order, gave them also the same name. A citizen of Douai, in his notes on Church matters,* says of the English Franciscans that their dress was the same as that of the Walloon Recollects, but their tonsure appeared larger, as only the top of their head was shaved. He also tells us that the English Recollects joined their brethren, the Walloon Recollects, at public processions, walking under the same cross, from the year 1670. The English Recollects were also allowed to make the quest in and around Douai, as well as their Walloon brethren. From the year 1676 the term Recollects is inserted in all their documents, and they had also the inscription of the old seal, "Regularis Observantiæ," changed on a new one then made into "Recollectorum."† * Douai, État Ecclesiastique, Notes recueillies par Mr. Plouvain. No. 1021.

† The term Regularis Observantiæ applied to the Observants, Strictioris Observantiæ to the Discalced, Reformed and Recollects.

We may quite safely endorse the explanation of the term "Recollects" given by Father Anthony Parkinson under the year 1503.

"This is the first year," he says, "wherein I find the Observants called Recollects; which name was given them on account of a statute made amongst them obliging every Province of the Regular Observance to have some Houses of Recollection, particularly appointed for such as were desirous to give themselves up wholly to Divine contemplation, most rigorous mortification, and the strictest observance of their Founder's Rule. These Recollects were no separate body distinct from the rest of the Observants, but made up a part of it, giving themselves first to the contemplative life, as the most proper preparation for the better discharging the duties of the active; as also for recovering their spirit when dissipated by preaching, teaching, ruling as superiors, or other similar exercises of obedience and charity."

We will give the words of one more historian of the Order: "Discalceati, Recollecti et Reformati non sunt nisi Observantes strictius viventes."*

Now, however, the term "Recollects" has a purely historical interest, since all distinctions in the Franciscan Order have been abrogated by Pope Leo XIII. in his bull Felicitate, October 4, 1897. †

The English Franciscans were not only strict in name, but from the beginning of the Province they were also strict observers of their Rule, especially in the matter of Holy Poverty, as the following regulations, made in 1637, will show :

For the essential observance of Holy Poverty, inasmuch as our circumstances on the mission allow we declare :

1. No one shall have a sum of money by him, or deposit it with another person, or cause it to be deposited, or keep it, without the Provincial's leave in writing. He that acts otherwise, incurs the transgression of the vow of poverty and the punishment of a proprietor.

2. The same guilt and punishment is incurred by him who assigns an annual rent for himself, the Province or the College, from alms given him.

3. Also he who accepts an alms given by way of rent, temporarily or for life, except with due stipulations and the Provincial's permission.

4. Also he who, without Superiors' leave, presumes to dispose of alms, or to send or give them away at will.

5. Also he who makes use of money received as alms for things curious, precious or superfluous, in food, clothing, and the rest which may be called extravagant considering the condition of the mission, according to the judgment of the Provincial Minister.

The faithful observance of these regulations was undoubtedly a great safeguard for the Franciscans on the English mission.

CHAPTER IX.

SERAPHIC CONFLICT OF THE SECOND PROVINCE FOR THE FAITH.*

DEATH did not tarry in coming to thin the slender ranks of the English Franciscans.

In 1634 five had died, including Father William a S. Augustino, head professor of theology at Douai. It must have been with mixed feelings that the fathers followed to the grave the mortal remains of their beloved brethren, whom they could as yet ill spare.

But others were ere long to wing their flight to the Heavenly Jerusalem; no tears would be shed over their graves, but the religious would unite in a joyous "Te Deum." Their death would not be considered a loss, but a most desirable gain, as it won for the English Province a crown of immortal glory.

Five fathers were put to death for the Catholic religion: Thomas Bullaker, Henry Heath, Arthur Bel, John Woodcock and John Wall. To these must be added Charles Mahony, an Irish Franciscan.

Four died in prison: Walter Colman, Francis Levison, Paul Atkinson and Germanus Holmes.

* What is said in this chapter must merely be taken as historical evidence; and as these sufferers for the Faith are not yet canonized, we have no intention of anticipating the judgment of the Church.

Others suffered imprisonment, some of them for many years.

VENERABLE THOMAS BULLAKER.

Scarcely had Father Bullaker landed at Plymouth, whither he had travelled from his friary of the Province of the Immaculate Conception in Spain, when he was apprehended and thrown into prison. But not long after he was liberated, and worked on the mission, where for about twelve years he longed and sighed unceasingly that he might lay down his life for Christ.

The long desired day came at last. On hearing the death sentence pronounced upon him, Father Bullaker could not contain his joy. He fell on his knees, and, with hands and eyes lifted up towards heaven, sang the "Te Deum" in thanksgiving to God. Then rising, he made a profound reverence to the court, thanking them for the great favour they had done him.

On Wednesday, October 12, 1642, he was brought out of Newgate prison, laid on a hurdle, and so drawn to Tyburn, showing all the way a wonderful cheerfulness in his countenance. At the place of execution he spoke to the people upon the text, "Thou art a priest for ever, according to the order of Melchisedech" (Ps. 109), and began to instruct them on the Sacrament of Christ's Body and Blood, until he was silenced by the officers, who ordered him to make an end. He readily obeyed, giving them hearty thanks for bringing him thither to die for his faith, a happiness which, he said, he had always longed for, though he acknowledged himself unworthy of it. He then received absolution from one of his brethren in the throng, on giving the sign agreed upon before, which was to hold his hands up to his face. He stood a short time in silent prayer, as it were in contemplation, till the cart was drawn away. He was cut down still breathing; his palpitating heart was torn from his bosom and held up aloft, that the crowd might see it. "Behold," cried the executioner, "the heart of a traitor."

His head was set upon London bridge, and his quarters upon the gates of the city. His heart, which had been thrown into the fire, was saved from the flames by the same Franciscan who had given him absolution. Among the relics at the Franciscan Convent at Taunton is an arm-bone of the martyr.

VENERABLE HENRY HEATH.

From his entrance into religion Father Heath had led a life of extraordinary perfection. In 1641 he determined to seek the consent of his superiors to enter upon the English mission, hoping to meet there with the crown of martyrdom: his desire was soon fulfilled.

On the very day of his arrival in London he was apprehended on suspicion and committed to the Compter prison. The next day he had to appear before the Lord Mayor, and, owning himself to be a priest, was sent to Newgate.

Soon after this he was brought to the bar, accused of being a priest and returning to England, and therefore guilty of high treason. The trial was soon over, for as he had acknowledged himself a priest, he was brought in guilty of the indictment, and sentence was passed accordingly. Father Heath, making a low reverence to the bench, said : " My lords, I give you thanks for the singular honour you have done me; for now I shall die for Christ." This occurred on April 11, 1643.

The 17th of the same month was the day of his triumph. Being asked how he could look so cheerful at such a time, he said that, though he always was convinced that the martyrs experienced much joy and consolation when they were to suffer for Christ, yet he never could have imagined this delight to be so exceeding great, as he now found by his own experience.

On seeing the hurdle with the horses standing ready to take him to Tyburn, he offered to lay himself down on the ground to be drawn in that manner over the stones and through the mire; but this was not allowed, and he was laid on the sledge. Arrived at the place of execution, he readily and cheerfully got up into the cart under the gallows, saying with an audible voice, " Into thy hands, O Lord, I commend my spirit." In that very cart he reconciled one of the malefactors who were to be executed with him. He prayed some time silently with joined hands and closed eyes. Then he recited aloud the hymn of Lauds for a martyr, " Martyr Dei, qui unicum," it being the feast of St. Anicetus, Pope and Martyr. This was followed by short aspirations, " Jesus, pardon me my sins! Jesus, convert England! Jesus, have mercy on this country! O England, be converted to the Lord thy God." He raised his hands above his head, possibly for absolution; the cart was drawn away, and he was left hanging even as he had stood before, with his hands lifted up towards heaven and his eyes cast down; and thus he calmly expired.

After his death he was cut down, disembowelled and quartered. His head was fixed upon London bridge, his quarters on four of the city gates. The Franciscan nuns at Taunton possess a bone of his about three inches long.

VENERABLE ARTHUR BEL.*

After returning from Scotland, Father Bel laboured most zealously on the English mission for the space of nine years, at the end of which it pleased God to grant him the martyr's crown, which during twenty years he had earnestly prayed for.

On Monday, November 6, 1643, he set out from Brigstock in Northamptonshire for London, but the next day he was apprehended by the Parliament soldiers at Stevenedge in Hertfordshire. On the Thursday he was taken to London and committed to Newgate prison. He had not been there full twenty-four hours, when he received a letter from the Provincial, requiring him to fill up the vacancy in the office of Guardian at Douai, caused by Father Heath's martyrdom. To this he sent the following reply.

REVEREND FATHER,

I received your command with humility and readiness in putting it into execution. Twenty hours before it reached me I had taken possession of Father Heath's place in Newgate. It only remains for me to ask your prayers, that I may persevere to the end ; and I beg of all Christians, with St. Andrew, not to hinder my passion. Your poor brother, F. BEL.

* His own signature is "Bel," not "Bell."

The death sentence was pronounced upon him on December 7. Father Bel intoned the "Te Deum," and returned hearty thanks to the court.

The 11th of December was the day fixed for his execution. He was laid upon a hurdle, and drawn by four horses to Tyburn. When he came to the place of execution, he said : "Now I see verified in me what was foretold by happy Thomas Bullaker." For, when Father Bel was complaining to him in prison that as he was the elder brother in religious profession, he ought rather to have gone before him, he replied : "God will have me to go first, but you shall soon follow."

Being put on a cart, he addressed a few words to the people, finishing thus : "I forgive with my whole heart those who have contributed to my death, even as I desire to be forgiven ; and I die joyfully for the Faith of Christ." Many a heart was moved, especially that of a parliamentary officer, who was about to suffer death for stealing. With tears in his eyes he turned to Father Bel, saying, "I wish to die in your religion." It was observed that the martyr spoke to him for some time in a whisper, probably suggesting acts of contrition and giving absolution.

As the cart was being drawn away, Father Bel raised his hands, and the prior of St. Magdalen's gave him absolution. He was allowed to hang for a short space of time, then cut down, drawn and quartered. In stripping him they found under his secular dress the habit of his Order, which he was accustomed to wear. Seeing this, the people cried out with astonishment, "See what mortified men these are, who thus despise the pleasures of the world!" Guards were appointed to prevent the Catholics from carrying off anything by way of relics. Some of these, however, were secured; and portions are kept by the nuns of the Third Order at Taunton.

Among the portraits of ten of the English Martyrs, commonly called "the miraculous portraits," at Lanherne in Cornwall, are those of the Franciscan Fathers Bullaker, Heath and Bel. The history of these portraits is thus told by the Carmelite nuns of Lanherne:

"Our community at Antwerp being distressed for novices, they determined to have recourse to the English Martyrs, and therefore made a novena in their honour. Shortly after, Miss Mary Gifford, of Staffordshire, presented herself and made her profession on April 8, 1681, aged forty-two, taking for her religious name Sister Mary of the Martyrs. She brought with her the portraits of these ten martyrs, with whom her own father had been a prisoner for some time, for the Faith. They were about to give their lives for it, and he was exceedingly anxious to obtain their portraits beforehand. Therefore he tried to take them; and although entirely unacquainted with the art of painting, he succeeded almost in a miraculous manner. These portraits have ever since been preserved with the utmost respect and veneration by our community."

VENERABLE JOHN WOODCOCK.

Thirsting for martyrdom, Father Woodcock landed at the end of the year 1643 at Newcastle-on-Tyne, with the intention of spending a short time in his native county of Lancashire, in the hope of converting some of his relations. Having made his way thither, he was apprehended the very first night after his arrival; and the next day a justice of the peace committed him to Lancaster gaol, where he was left two years before being tried. During this time he acted the part of a missionary among his fellow-prisoners.

His trial at length came on, August 6, 1646, when he was placed at the bar with two secular priests, the Venerable Edward Bamber and the Venerable Thomas Whitaker. He confessed himself a priest and a Franciscan; indeed his zeal during the time of his imprisonment was sufficient proof, and the questions were put to him merely as a matter of form. Upon this confession he was condemned to die, as in cases of high treason. It is scarcely possible to imagine the joy with which he received the sentence, exclaiming, "Praise be to God! God be thanked!"

He passed his last night in prayer and meditation, and the next day, being August 7, 1646, he was drawn together with his two companions to the place of execution. The sight of these three champions of the Faith filled the Catholics with sentiments of wonder and edification, whereas the Protestants were amazed, seeing the courage and joy with which these servants of God went to meet a barbarous and ignominious death.

At the place of execution, Father Woodcock, being ordered up the ladder, after a short prayer, offered to speak to the people to explain the cause of his death and the truth of the Catholic Faith; but he was quickly interrupted by the sheriff, and flung off the ladder by the executioner. It is said that the rope broke immediately, and he was ordered up the ladder again, to be hanged a second time; then cut down more than half alive and barbarously butchered.

His head was kept in the cloister of St. Bonaventure's at Douai before the French Revolution. The Franciscan nuns at Taunton possess an arm-bone of the venerable martyr.

We have his portrait, as well as those of the three preceding Martyrs, in the "Certamen."

VENERABLE JOHN WALL.

Father Wall was zealously labouring on the mission in Worcestershire, when he was apprehended at Rushock Court, not long after the first breaking-out of Oates's plot, by the sheriff's deputy and others, who were making search for another man. He was taken before Sir John Packington, justice of the peace, and refusing to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, was committed to Worcester gaol in the beginning of December, 1678.

The sentence of death was pronounced upon him in the usual form on April 25, 1679, at Worcester. The confessor made a bow and said, "Thanks be to God ! God save the king ! I beseech God to bless your lordship and all this honourable bench !" The judge replied, "You have spoken very well : I do not intend you shall die, at least not for the present, until I know the king's further pleasure."

Father Wall was taken back to prison, and after some time was sent up to London, as were also several other priests, who lay under condemnation for their sacerdotal character. There he was examined and then brought back to Worcester. Four months had elapsed since his condemnation, when he was ordered to be executed. A priest named William Levison, brother to the Franciscan, Venerable Francis Levison, visited him in prison, heard his confession and gave him Holy Communion. He again gave him absolution at his execution, which took place at Red Hill, near Worcester, on August 22, 1679. His head was cut off, and his body permitted to be buried in St. Oswald's churchyard, where it was afterwards remarked that his grave remained green when the rest of the place was all bare.

His head was secretly conveyed by the said priest, William Levison, to Father Leo Randolph, to be taken to St. Bonaventure's, Douai, where it was respectfully preserved until the French Revolution. A tooth and also a bone of the martyr are among the relics at Taunton.

VENERABLE CHARLES MAHONY.

Returning from abroad to his native country, this Irish Franciscan was driven by stress of weather upon the coast of Wales, in the heat of the persecution. When he was discovered to be a priest, he was committed to prison, and tried at Denbigh, upon an indictment of high treason, for taking orders in the Church of Rome and being found in this kingdom. He confessed himself to be a priest and was thereupon condemned, and sent to Ruthin to be executed. On August 12, 1679, he was drawn to the place where he had to suffer, in the habit of his order. Arrived there, he said: "Now God Almighty is pleased I should suffer martyrdom, His Holy Name be praised, since I die for my religion!"

He suffered with great constancy, being cut down alive and butchered according to sentence. His age was under forty.

WALTER COLMAN.

He was condemned, with six other priests, on December 8, 1641, in the sessions at the Old Bailey, to be hanged, drawn and quartered on the 13th following. They were, however, reprieved; but ultimately no further steps were taken in the matter, and, one of the number having died, the others were allowed to linger away their lives at Newgate.

Refined and cultivated, belonging to one of England's oldest families, brought up in the midst of plenty, Father Colman must have suffered a hundred martyrdoms in his loathsome prison cell, where he lingered three or four years. So obscure was his fate that not even his own brethren knew exactly when his imprisonment was terminated by a precious death, which occurred in the year 1645.

His portrait is in Father Mason's work, "Certamen Seraphicum."

VENERABLE FRANCIS LEVISON.

William Levison, the priest who visited Father Wall in prison, in his letter dated August 25, 1679, writes of his brother, Venerable Francis Levison, as follows: "My poor brother continues still a close prisoner, and complains much of want. The justice who committed him has endeavoured to bribe witnesses to swear against him, but as yet cannot prevail with any. What will be the event of these proceedings, only God knows."

After fourteen months close confinement he died in prison a confessor of Christ, February 11, 1680.

His precious death is thus recorded in the Register, in the necrology of the Chapter held on June 16 of the same year: "V. A. P. F. Ignatius a S. Clara, qui in carcere post 14 mensium inclusionem ibi obiit in Anglia."

FATHER PAUL ATKINSON.

This glorious confessor of the faith had been duly summoned on his mission to attend the twenty-third Chapter, to be celebrated in London on July 9, 1698, but did not appear, nor was any excuse received for his absence. This was shortly after accounted for. He had been apprehended and hurried off to gaol, and condemned to perpetual imprisonment for priesthood. His brethren employed every effort, but in vain, to procure his liberation from Hurst Castle, the place of his strict confinement. They did not, however, forget him, and a sympathetic mention of him was made at every Chapter meeting, that is thirteen times, until 1731, when his happy death is thus recorded :

“In Hurst prison, Hants, died the venerable Confessor of the Faith and of Christ’s priesthood, Father Paul Atkinson, formerly professor of theology, Definitor of the Province, and a jubilarian in the Order, who, during a continual martyrdom of thirty years, reflected honour on his prison, on our Province and on the English mission ; who, though not cut off by the persecutor’s sword, still, as we piously trust, did not forego the palm of martyrdom. Wherefore we do not so much recommend him to the prayers of our brethren as propose him as a model for their imitation.”

He departed this life on October 15, 1729.

We have his engraved portrait, made in the year 1728.

FATHER GERMANUS HOLMES.

This is the last Franciscan who died in prison for the faith. After the Stuart rising of 1745 Father Holmes was seized during the revival of persecution consequent on that event, thrown into the Castle of Lancaster for being a priest, and there died a prisoner in 1746. At the Chapter held in London on October 19 of that year, his death is thus recorded in the necrology :

“The venerable confessor of Jesus Christ, Germanus Holmes, at one time professor of philosophy in our college at Douai, who, after suffering various insults from the insolent dregs of the populace on account of his priestly character, was consigned by the magistrates to Lancaster Castle and loaded with iron chains, where for four months he fought the good fight, and happily, as we hope, finished the course of his mortal life, having contracted the fever through the filthiness of the place ; but not without suspicion of poison administered to him by the wicked woman who brought him his food."

FRANCISCANS WHO SUFFERED IMPRISONMENT.

Probably the first father of the second Province who suffered imprisonment was BONAVENTURE JACKSON.

In a letter from a London secular priest, named Clark, to the Rev. Mr. Fitton, the clergy agent at Rome, dated December 18, 1633, there is this passage : " Within this fortnight I heare there are four prisoners released upon bond, videlicet, Mr. Henry More, a Jesuit, out of the New prison, and Mr. Tresame, agent for the Benedictines, out of the said prison, Father Bonaventure, a Franciscan, out of Newgate, and a fourth, whose name I know not." *

Father Jackson is described in the " Certamen " as " having been called to England by Father Gennings, laboured with great fruit of salvation, earning praise and gratitude, and having suffered persecution, affliction and imprisonment, died an eminent confessor."

During the troubled period subsequent upon the tragical end of Charles I., it is recorded in the Register, in the year 1653, that " three fathers have suffered imprisonment, and have with danger of their lives undergone their trial, showing great constancy."

* Records of the English Province S.J.

In 1656 we read: "Since the last Chapter three fathers have suffered imprisonment."

In 1679 and 1680 Fathers BERNARDINE LANGWORTH and FRANCIS OSBALDESTON were under a "Præmunire" for refusing to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy.

Father MARIANUS NAPIER was tried and condemned for Oates's plot, but was not executed. In 1684 his death sentence was commuted into one of exile, whereupon he returned to Douai.

Father GERVASE CARTWRIGHT was arrested at the Revolution, and thrown into Leicester gaol. Having been in prison for twenty-eight months, he was sentenced to death. But this sentence was commuted by the Prince of Orange into that of exile. His brethren looked upon him as a confessor of Christ, which is shown by the fact that his head was enshrined in the cloister of the English Convent at Bruges.

Fathers FRANCIS HARDWICK and WILLIAM LOCKIER were consigned to Newgate prison, London, in the beginning of December, 1688.

Fathers DANIEL SELBY and LEWIS GRIMBALSON were imprisoned in York Castle; and Father BERNARDINE BARRAS in the dungeon of the Kidcote prison, at the end of York bridge, for several months at the period of the Revolution.

Thus did the English Franciscans of the second Province prove by deeds better than by words that the Seraphic spirit flourished among them.

CHAPTER X.

VOCATIONS. ZEAL AND DEVOTION. MARYLAND. DEATH OF FATHER GENNINGS.

FATHER GENNINGS, himself an old student of the English College at Douai, had recruited his early companions from among the alumni there; thus this famous institution had contributed its share at the beginning of the Province. Some of those who entered the Order afterwards had also made their early studies there.

From time to time also natives of Douai or the neighbourhood, moved by the eminently self-sacrificing spirit they saw in the English Franciscans, preferred to join them rather than their native brethren at Douai, either as clerics or as lay brothers. We can distinguish them among the other members of the English Province by their names.

A secular priest, John Talbot, who was labouring on the English mission, petitioned to be admitted to the Order. The Provincial, as we have seen, had the power of receiving such candidates in England, and he applied it in this case. At the Intermediate Chapter of 1638 it was resolved after mature deliberation not to send him to Douai for his noviceship, but to give him the habit of the Order, and let him pass his year of probation in England, in a place where he could most of the time wear the habit and be under the direction of a novice master to be appointed by the Provincial.

In the year 1650 another extraordinary vocation is chronicled. One of the Benedictine fathers of Douai, Francis Tresham, a man of irreproachable life, was desirous of exchanging the habit of St. Benedict for that of St. Francis. When the application had been duly considered, it was thought that his vocation came from God, as had been the case with St. Anthony of Padua before. Shortly after his admission he was sent on the English mission, where during the ten remaining years of his life he zealously laboured for the good of souls.

The English Franciscans secured a useful helper in 1663. The Very Reverend Father Augustine Niffo had been delegated by the Commissary, Father James de Riddere, to make the visitation of the Province and preside at the Chapter in London, in 1662. No doubt he thoroughly understood the nature of the work in which our fathers were engaged, for he was Superior of the missionaries* of the Order in Flanders. He must have been favourably impressed with what he saw in England, for he joined the English Province with little delay, and was straightway made Custos.

The fathers did not leave undone anything they thought conducive to the good of religion in England. Thus it was resolved in 1632 to set up a printing press at Douai for the greater facility of publishing works against our sectaries. Father Bonaventure a S. Thoma was appointed manager of this press.

A regulation was made in 1638 that the missionaries were bound frequently to catechise children and others, either in their own homes or at the priest's residence. The inculcation of the necessity of catechising was often afterwards repeated.

Devotion to our Blessed Lady, which the Franciscans have inherited from their Founder, was not forgotten by the fathers of the second Province. So early as 1632 it was enacted that daily after Compline the antiphon "Tota pulchra" should be recited in honour of the Immaculate Conception. Also that before the principal Mass the litany of our Blessed Lady should be said every day for the conversion of England. Among the regulations made in 1648 for the College of St. Bonaventure at Douai are the following:

"Every Saturday the Mass of the Immaculate Conception shall be sung for the conversion of England.

"On the feasts of the Visitation and Presentation of the Blessed Virgin, High Mass shall be sung, as well as the 'Tota Pulchra' after Compline, both at first and second Vespers."

There was also a Confraternity of the Immaculate Conception erected in our church at Douai.

The English Franciscans, while giving so many proofs of devotion to the Mother of God, were not unmindful of St. Francis, the sure guide to perfection for persons in the world. They admitted candidates to the Third Order both at Douai and on the mission, but not until they had obtained sufficient information, and convinced themselves in each individual case that the step was not rashly taken.

They also had some pictures printed, representing St. Francis descending into purgatory, as he is piously believed to do every year on his feast, according to Bartholomew of Pisa and other historians, to deliver the souls of the members of the three Orders which he has founded. They distributed these pictures among their friends and others, so that in the end a great number of them were circulated among the people. This gave rise to some controversy, and Father Peter Marchant, of the Province of Flanders, who presided as Commissary Visitor at the Chapter held in London in 1637, thought it well to intervene. He decided, first, that the said tradition and picture contained no error, but was conformable to piety, as it was handed down by pious authors; secondly, that it was not expedient to spread them promiscuously in England, which was a heretical country, as it might give offence to some who did not understand the nature of this devotion among Catholics; thirdly, if the Fathers wished to give them to pious people who were devout to our Holy Father St. Francis, they should do so privately, explaining at the same time the nature of the subject, in order to avoid all occasion of misapprehension or contradiction.

The labours of the English Franciscans were not confined to the territory of their native country: they were ready to go where they could serve the spiritual interests of their countrymen; and this they showed by accepting a share in the missionary work in Maryland, where the Fathers of the Society of Jesus had settled about forty years before, four of them with one lay brother having accompanied the colonists when they sailed for the New World in 1633.

Maryland was granted in 1632 by King Charles I. to the second Lord Baltimore, whose father, for whom it was intended, had died before the Charter was issued. His brother, Leonard Calvert, was the first Governor of the colony, which received from Charles the name of Maryland in honour of his queen, Henrietta Maria. The Baltimores were Catholics, but all religious denominations were tolerated in Maryland from the beginning. The words, "The harvest indeed is great, but the labourers are few," could be applied with truth to the colony, for in the "Maryland Annual Letters" of the Society of Jesus we read in 1671 as follows: "In the mission of Maryland this year are two priests and two temporal coadjutors. The mission bears no little fruit, as we learn from the last letters, and its fruit would be still greater were the labourers more in number. Few are living of those sent in former years. Two died this year, Father William Pelham and Thomas Sherborne, a lay brother. There were fifty converts, many of high note, and fifty-four were baptized."

The Franciscans were asked to help in the work; and at the Intermediate Chapter held at Somerset House in 1672, under the presidency of Father Nicholas Cross, Provincial, it was agreed to send some fathers of the English Province thither. The first to set out for that distant mission were Fathers Polycarp Wicksted and Basil Hobart. The result of their labours may be seen from a paragraph in the "Annual Letters of the Society," where under the year 1673 we read: "Two Franciscan fathers were sent last year from England as coadjutors in the labours of the mission, between whom and ourselves fraternal charity and offices of mutual friendship are exercised, to the common good of the Catholic cause." *

In 1675 Father Masseus Massey was appointed Preses, and with him were Fathers Henry Carew, Basil Hobart and Edward Golding. In 1677 Father Henry Carew became Preses. He was succeeded in 1680 by Father Masseus Massey, who was re-appointed in 1683. In 1686 Lord Baltimore must have asked for more Franciscans, for at the Definitory held on July 15 of that year in London, it was proposed: "What shall we answer to the request of Lord Baltimore for missionaries in Maryland?" The reply was: "We shall provide two missionaries if we find fathers apt and willing to go."

But in the year 1689 the government was taken out of the hands of Lord Baltimore by the Convention of England. Mr. Copley was appointed Governor by commission from William and Mary in 1692, when the Protestant religion was established by law. How it fared in those days with Catholics may be gathered from the following paragraph in the "Annual Letters:"

"Our missions in the West Indies, of Maryland, and indeed of New York, underwent the same fate with those of England. In the latter (New York) there were only two priests, and these were forced in this storm to change their residence, as was also the Catholic Governor himself. One of them travelled on foot to Maryland, the other, after many perils on the sea, having been captured and plundered by Dutch pirates, at length arrived safe in France. In Maryland great difficulties are suffered. Our fathers yet remain to render what consolation they can to the distressed Catholics."

However, in 1699, two fathers were again sent thither as missionaries, Bruno Taylor and James Haddock. The latter died there in 1720; and this is the last we hear of the English Franciscans in Maryland.

In the midst of their labours for the glory of God and the good of souls, the English Franciscans had suffered an irreparable loss. Father John Gennings, having witnessed for many years the growth of the Province and the progress of the work which he had so happily commenced, having reached the truly patriarchal age of over ninety years, went at last to his reward. He had continued to work on the English mission until the year preceding his demise, when he signed the acts of the Chapter for the last time; and feeling death approaching, he hastened back to Douai, wishing to breathe his last among his children at St. Bonaventure's College, which had been the scene of the greatest work of his life. There he calmly expired on November 12, new style, in 1660. The following is a translation of his Latin mortuary bill:

JESUS, MARY, FRANCIS.

In the year of our Lord 1660, on November 12, there died at the friary of the English Franciscans at Douai the aged and venerable Father John Gennings, a man of exemplary and blameless life, steadfast in his purpose, and beloved by all. After having laboured in the midst of dangers with great fruit on the English mission, feeling drawn to a stricter life, he embraced the Rule of St. Francis, and restored the English Province of Friars Minor, which had been destroyed by the blind fury of heretics, and founded St. Bonaventure's College at Douai. He was three times Provincial, often Custos and Definitor. And whilst he worthily filled the office of Commissary Provincial in England, feeling that the laying away of his tabernacle was at hand, and wishing to die among his sorrowing brethren and children, he returned to the house of his foundation, where he peacefully slept in the Lord, full of days and merits, about the ninety-fifth year of his age, the sixty-fourth of priesthood and mission, and the fifty-second of religious life. We recommend his soul to your prayers and sacrifices, that he may without delay enter into the joy after which he always sighed.

CHAPTER XI.

BENEFACTIONS AND OBLIGATIONS OF MASSES.

FROM various quarters the English Franciscans received material assistance to help them in carrying on the great work they had undertaken.

They always showed themselves extremely zealous in the observance of their vow of poverty, and made use of what was left or given them in the true Franciscan spirit. From among many proofs we take the following declaration, made at the Chapter of 1683 :

For the direction of the consciences of all the Religious of the Province in the perfect observance of the Rule of our Holy Father St. Francis, especially as regards the most high poverty, the Fathers of the Province declare that all alms received either annually or otherwise, have been accepted and are administered according to our Rule and the Apostolic declarations. In witness of which we have made a protestation, which the present Chapter also renews, to the following effect :

Whereas by a precept of our Holy Rule all property is forbidden us in common as well as in private, and with regard to money also the simple use : we, the Provincial and Fathers of the English Province of the Friars Minor of the Stricter Observance, wishing purely to observe our Rule, in imitation of the example left us by the ancient fathers of our Province, for the security of our conscience, and for the edification of those who will come after us, herewith declare :

That we repudiate all property in common as well as in private, admitting only the use of what is necessary, given us either as a free gift, or alms, or as retribution for our labour : not as if we had a strict right to those things, but being content with their simple use. And although, in our quality of Apostolic labourers on the mission, we are often forced to have recourse to money in order to procure the necessities of life, according to the law of nature and the concessions and declarations of many Popes, yet, even when actually engaged on the mission we cannot do so indiscriminately, or as proprietors, but only with moderation and as procurators of the donors, for past, present or imminent needs. And thus, charging the consciences of our subjects in this matter, we exonerate our own ; and we beseech them by the Poverty and Wounds of Christ, that mindful of their holy profession they strive by the moderate use of temporal things to gain everlasting treasures.

As regards all alms, especially of money, given the Province in general, either for the support of the missions or for the erection and maintenance of friaries or Colleges, we declare that the full and entire ownership thereof remains with the donors, or devolves to the Apostolic See, no matter in what terms the donations are made, lest in the present state of things the pious intention of our benefactors be frustrated, or the Province deprived of the necessary help. Hence we believe and declare that, although according to the laws of the Church the Provincial Minister has a discretionary power as to the use of things necessary or allowed to the Order, nevertheless the donors alone, or the Apostolic Syndics who are procurators for the Holy See, have a strict right to dispose of them as owners. Nor can we, nor will we have recourse to such pecuniary alms through the Syndics as our spiritual friends, except inasmuch as we are bound by our Rule to provide for the wants of the sick and the clothing of the brethren, or other similar needs, according to places, and times, and cold climates.

In witness whereof we have signed and sealed this document, February 21, 1676.

F. JOHN A S. CRUCE, Prov. Min.

F. FRANCIS A S. CLARA.

F. NICHOLAS A S. CRUCE.

F. DANIEL A S. FRANCISCO.

The General Minister, Joseph Ximenes Samaniego, in a letter dated Madrid, March 24, 1678, expressed himself fully satisfied with this declaration.

It has been thought well to insert the foregoing document, in order that the reader may understand that the English Franciscans were within the limits of their Rule and Constitutions in accepting gifts or bequests as they did.

(Benefactions mentioned in connection with the residences are not given here, to avoid repetition.)

Conspicuous among the early bequests is that of the Fleet Street houses. Mr. William Lyndsey left us five houses in Fleet Street at the corner of Swan Alley. They were held in trust by some Catholic gentlemen

"upon condition that they should give the profits issuing from the said houses by way of alms to the Friars Minor of the Province of England, until such time as England may be converted, that the said Friars may have a place to shelter themselves, until they can provide a larger building."

Two of these houses fronted Fleet Street, and were let at fifty pounds each yearly. The three others stood back, and one of them was let at seventeen pounds, the two others at nine pounds each per annum.

The first trustees were Mr. Hawkins, Mr. Englefield and Mr. Bolton. Subsequently we find among them the Duke of Norfolk, the Honourable Ralph Widdrington and Edward Burdet, Esq.

The title-deeds of these houses, together with all our other papers, were lost in Oates' plot. But afterwards the Earl of Sunderland gave a warrant for recovering our writings.

These houses were burnt in the great fire of London; and as by act of Parliament the buildings were to be re-constructed or the ground sold, it was resolved to rebuild the houses. It appears that Mrs. Lindsey gave three hundred pounds towards the rebuilding: she was to receive during her lifetime thirty-five pounds annually out of the rents. Mrs. Catherine Sturdy, who was then our Syndic, bore half the charge of rebuilding the three back houses: she was in consequence to enjoy half the profits of the said tenements for the term of forty-one years, she paying out of her moiety half the rent of the ground, which was valued at four pounds and ten shillings per annum.

Her allowance was afterwards reduced to twenty-four pounds yearly ; and the last payment due to her was made in 1710.

In 1653 Mrs. Margaret Anderton left two hundred pounds to the English Franciscans for the maintenance of one missionary of ours in England, for which purpose she desired to nominate Father William Anderton for life ; and the Definitory consented to this.

The following is a copy of Sir William Powell's declaration, transmitted to us by his grandnephew John Powell :

Whereas I Sir William Powell of Rolleston Parke in y<sup>e</sup> County of Stafford, Knight, have by my last will and testament bearing date y<sup>e</sup> 11th day of this instant May, 1654, given and granted an annuity of five pounds per annum to be paid for ever out of y<sup>e</sup> Lands, which by my said will I have given to my grand-nephew John Powell. Now I doe hereby declare and appoint that the said five pounds shall be annually paid to a good man to pray for my soule, and for my succeeding heirs, and to help poore Catholiques, such a one as Mr. Roper shall appoint, and after his decease, any one whome y<sup>e</sup> Provinciall of y<sup>e</sup> Order of Franciscans shall nominate and appoint. In Witnesse whereof I the said Sir William Powell have hereunto sett my hand this 12th of May, 1654.

In the presence of Francis Howard, Jo. Tanfield.

WILLIAM POWELL.

This is a true Coppy, JOHN POWELL.

At the request of Father Francis a S. Clara, a benefactor assigned one thousand pounds, which, in his own name and for purposes to be determined by him, he desired the Mother Abbess of Nieuport (afterwards Bruges) to invest with a merchant or corporation. Half the interest was yearly to be paid her, the other half to be handed over by way of alms to the Guardian of our College at Douai. So long as this alms was received, a Mass was to be said every Tuesday for the said benefactor. At his death the principal was to be paid to the English Franciscan Province, and the Fathers had to celebrate for the repose of his soul Masses and Offices, as they did for one of their own brethren.

This bequest was accepted by the Definitory on June 12, 1656. The following note is appended to the above: "What became of this principal appears not. All I find is a paper, dated April 24, 1665, and signed by Madam Brinckhurst (Abbess) and her council, wherein they desire the Lord Arundel of Wardour to pay our then Provincial four hundred and eighty pounds out of their monies, in the said Lord's hands, for satisfying for the like sum, their then necessities forced them to make use of, and which they took out of our Province's monies, put out at Ghent, in the name of their Convent."

Mr. William Cleve left by his last will and testament an alms of twelve hundred pounds to the Province of the English Franciscans. He had also given another thousand some years before his death. He was to have ten pounds per annum out of the interest during his lifetime, and the use of three hundred pounds during the life of his ghostly Father, to be an annuity for him. One hundred pounds of this money was to be devoted to the building of an infirmary at Douai, which was done by the year 1667.

Mrs. Marthana Wilson signed a declaration to the effect that the profits of these moneys must go towards the maintenance of the friary at Douai, until such time as we can build a new place in England (if God please to be so merciful to this nation as to grant that liberty); or else wherever the Religious of the said Province shall judge expedient. This, under her signature, June 18, 1667, she declares to be the donor's wish as he had made known to her, and also to Mr. Hunt (Father Davenport) and Mr. Grey (Father Philip a S. Clara).

There is a note added to the above, saying: "How the aforesaid alms was disposed of does not appear by our Register. And all I can say is that perhaps eight hundred pounds put out on Tettesworth Farm in Staffordshire may be part of it. Likewise five hundred due from Mr. Whitehall upon bond; and also two hundred more mortgage on Welde House. Upon further enquiry, I find nine hundred put into Lord Widdrington's hands, all paid in to the Provincial's orders at the building of Lincoln's Inn Fields Chapel."

It will not be out of place to mention here that the Widdringtons always were devoted friends to the Order of St. Francis. At Lulworth, in Dorsetshire, is a picture of Sir Edward Widdrington, laid out in the Franciscan habit, with this inscription :

Vera effigies Illustrissimi Domini Edwardi Widdrington, Equitis et Baronetti, ætatis suæ 57. Obiit anno 1671, 13 Junii.*

In 1668 two names were inserted among our special benefactors. The first was that of William Wilson, who was to be considered a Founder of St. Bonaventure's at Douai. Special prayers and Masses were ordered to be said for him, for his wife Marthana Wilson, and for his daughter.

The second was that of Rev. William Vandermote, beneficiary of the Collegiate Church of St. Peter at Lille and member of the Third Order of St. Francis, who was a singular benefactor to our establishment at Douai, and was also affiliated to our Order.

On May 12, 1674, Mrs. Mary Freeman gave one hundred pounds to the Province, in consideration of which the Fathers engaged to say one Mass every month for her husband's soul and one for her own ; a solemn anniversary Mass on the day of her husband's death, and one on her own. Besides, immediately after her death, thirty Masses were to be said for her husband's soul and hers. She died June 20, 1689.

Mr. Slaughter, a great admirer of Mr. Hunt (Father a S. Clara), and much devoted to the Order, with his wife, Lady Gage, put a sum of money in a bank at Paris, with obligation that, after both their deaths, the profit of it should be paid us or the House of Douai as an alms, upon condition of our praying for the repose of their souls; and he made Sir Daniel Arthur and his heirs trustees to see his will executed.

The following note is added: "This money was paid in by the bank of Paris in the Mississippi year, to the Guardian of Douai, in bank bills (then current money), which were delivered up to Mr. Doué, the Syndic, who has since yearly paid to the House one hundred and sixty florins as part of the principal, and will continue so to do till all the said bills are quite paid off. In this, Mr. Doué did us great service, by getting gradually the full principal of the said bills, which if sold at first would not have yielded thirty in the hundred."

Mrs. Taylor left a sum of money, to be prayed for by our fathers, of which councillor Poole has the disposal, and in my time (Fr. Bonaventure Parry's) has given us two or three sums, still requiring Masses for them, which are all most faithfully discharged here (in England) and at the Mother-house (Douai). Mr. Fortescue can give an account of this donation and all the conditions of it.

Richard Staley, goldsmith, of London, left all his lands and houses situated in the village of Cheshunt in Hertfordshire to Mr. Edward Burdet, counsellor, of Gray's Inn, after the death of Beatrix, the said Richard's wife, and of her sisters. And the said Beatrix made a declaration to the Provincial (in 1686), that the intention of R. Staley was that the legacy is for the use of our Province.

In the county of Staffordshire is a farm called Tettesworth, mortgaged by Mr. Hollingshead to Mrs. Garven for eight hundred pounds, in trust for us, afterwards made over to Mr. Foot and his son, in trust as before, and from them conveyed to Mr. Burdet, who, since the Revolution has been at great trouble and charges about it, by reason of a posterior mortgage of a certain person, who sued for his right "in forma pauperis," and pretended the prior mortgage was for superstitious uses; and in the end obtained a decree in Chancery for proportionable allowance out of the profits of the said farm, as also an abatement of seventy pounds of the above mentioned eight hundred principal. So that this farm, which for some years paid the full interest of eight hundred pounds at six per cent, and somewhat more, amounting to fifty-five pounds per annum, till Lady Day 1696, pays now (1704) and from that year, only forty-six and four shillings, the pounds rest being adjudged by a decree of Chancery to the posterior mortgagee, as above.

Mr. N. Edmundson of Skerton near Lancaster, Father to our Br. Edmundson, has given us a house and garden in Skerton. The writings are in Mr. John Howlden our trustee's hands, and a copy among our writings. What the house and garden yield yearly, I [Fr. Bonaventure Parry] can't tell.

The following benefactions are mentioned about the year 1700.

Sir Nicholas Sheirborn of Stonyhurst made a donation of one hundred pounds.

Mrs. Mary Powell and daughter gave a bond of one hundred and fifty pounds, for which Mr. Burdet was trustee.

The relations of Father Martin (alias Charles) Grimston settled an annuity on him, in regard of which the trustees, Sir Walter Vavasor and Lady Winifred Strickland, invested the sum of two hundred pounds in the bank of the Town-house of Paris, the profits of which were to be devoted to the uses of the English Franciscan Province.

Mrs. Ogle gave a donation of one hundred pounds, in consideration of which she was to receive ten pounds per annum during her life. She died in the year 1706.

On June 5, 1716, the Definitory agreed to saying three Masses yearly on the anniversary of the death of Miss Mary Pinnar (January 24), who had left us one hundred pounds.

Also five Masses on the anniversary of Edward Smith, Knight, who had left us a sum of money in his will.

Two donations are recorded in 1719.

Lady Anne Curson of Waterperry gave two hundred pounds for the support of a missionary in England to be nominated by our Provincial. He had to say two Masses every week for her intention.

Mrs. Frances Grey gave one hundred pounds to build an infirmary at Douai. The Fathers engaged to sing two anniversary Masses yearly, one for her, the other for her husband.

In 1740 Sir William Holman, Knight, left four hundred pounds for the support of a missionary of the Order in England, it whatever place it might be thought most expedient.

In the same year three hundred pounds were left by Mr. Joseph Gerard and Margaret, his wife, to be paid by Mrs. Fleetwood. It was agreed to say two hundred Masses for their souls, and to inscribe their names among the special benefactors.

In 1764 Anthony Wright bequeathed to our Fathers the sum of two hundred and fifty pounds. A weekly Mass was to be celebrated at Douai for himself and family.

In 1766 Mrs. Frances Doughty left us thirty pounds: a solemn anniversary Mass was annually to be celebrated for her.

Also in that year Mrs. Mary Blount of Mapledurham gave a donation of thirty pounds, in view of which the Fathers engaged to celebrate a solemn anniversary Mass and some low Masses.

In 1768 Mr. John Webbe left to the fathers twenty pounds: they had to say six Masses annually for the repose of his soul.

In 1770 the Fathers undertook to say one hundred low Masses for the repose of the soul of Michael Creagh, who had left them fifty pounds.

In 1771 Mr. Thomas Reeves left twenty pounds for Masses.

In the same year Mrs. Elizabeth Gibson bequeathed the sum of four hundred and twenty-seven pounds to the Franciscans; they agreed to celebrate one solemn anniversary Mass and all the low Masses on that day and the following day for her relatives. These obligations were to last for twelve years.

In 1773 Mrs. Mary Markham bequeathed to the fathers the sum of thirteen hundred pounds. Besides a certain number of Masses to be said by the incumbent of Rowington and other fathers on the mission, there was to be at Douai every year a solemn anniversary Mass with all the low Masses of the day for her repose, on February 12.

In 1776 "Dominus Blundell de inch" gave ten pounds, the fathers engaging to celebrate one solemn Requiem and all the low Masses of the day at his death.

Mrs. Plowden, Mr. Mostyn and Mrs. Monington gave twenty pounds each in the same year, with obligation of one solemn Requiem and all the low Masses of the day, and moreover one solemn anniversary with the office of the dead.

Also in the same year Mr. Alexander Craw left us one hundred pounds, with the following obligations: one solemn Requiem and all the low Masses of the day; one solemn anniversary with the office of the dead ; a certain number of Masses to be said by our fathers on the English mission.

In 1782, Agnes Kempster left twenty pounds, the fathers undertaking to say twelve Masses annually at Douai.

In 1794, Mrs. Elizabeth Walgrave left us one hundred pounds, simply stipulating that the fathers should pray for the repose of her soul.

CHAPTER XII.

ALTERNATE JOYS AND SORROWS.

THE Franciscans continued steadily multiplying and spreading in England.

In the metropolis the English Friars Minor were not the only representatives of the Order. From the year 1671 they held their Chapters at Somerset House "in Conventu Regali Reverendorum Patrum Ordinis Sancti Patris nostri Francisci Arabidorum," the home of the Spanish Franciscans, where they were not only allowed to meet on those occasions, but also entertained in royal fashion.

Another addition came in 1677, this time a Flemish Recollect. At that time there was a fair number of Flemish merchants in London, who were desirous of having a priest to hear their confessions and preach to them in their own language. It was almost natural for them to address themselves to the Franciscans, who were very popular in Flanders; and they, on being asked, showed themselves quite willing to accede to the request. The merchants then sought the consent of the English Franciscans, promising that no inconvenience would arise, and that they guaranteed all that was necessary for the father's maintenance. The English Definitory gladly welcomed their Brother from across the Channel, putting only one condition to the arrangement, which was that the Flemish father should be under the jurisdiction of the English Provincial.

But a storm against the Catholic Religion was brewing in England: it burst out in 1678. It is not within the scope of this work to describe the doings of Titus Oates and Bedloe; suffice it to say that, in the fierce persecution which followed, eighteen Catholics were convicted and executed; ten of these were priests, whilst the opportunity was taken of putting to death seven others, together with Oliver Plunket, the Venerable Archbishop of Armagh, solely for the sake of their religion. The Venerable Franciscan fathers, John Wall, Charles Mahoney and Francis Levison, shed a lustre on the Order on that occasion by laying down their lives for the faith, whilst several of their brethren suffered imprisonment.

On October 14 of that ominous year, 1678, the English Franciscans were holding their Intermediate Chapter in London. It seems that they had to hurry, or to break up before completing the usual documents, for the acts of that Congregation are incomplete, and were collected so far as was possible from the fragments: "Dispositiones, quantum poterant ex fragmentis ejusdem Congregationis, quæ in initio magnæ in Catholicos persecutionis celebrata fuit, collectæ."

In those days also the Franciscans lost all their papers and deeds, and it was not until the year 1686 that they got them back by means of

OUR WRITINGS TAKEN AWAY IN THE POPISH PLOT TIME.

Robert Earl of Sunderland, Baron Spencer of Wormleighton, President of his Majesty's most honourable Council, and principal Secretary of State.

These are in his Majesty's name, to authorise and require you forthwith to deliver unto Mr. Charles Pora the following writings, or such of them as shall be in your custody, viz., one bond of Charles Clark, to pay unto Ralph Dixon for the use of the English College at Douai twenty pounds. A deed of mortgage made by Sir George Browne, and Dame Elizabeth his wife, and William Thorold of several parcels of land in the county of Lincoln, to pay yearly to the use of the English College at Douai twenty pounds. Two indentures made by William Brew and George Alexander unto Susan Lyndsey, of two tenements in Fleet Street, and divers other tenements there and in Swan Alley, all going for the remainder of ten thousand years. A will whereby it appears that William Lyndsey gave the aforesaid tenements and premises and the rents to the English College, or Recollects, in Douai, with all the ancient deeds from April 25, in the 4th of Edward VI. A deed by which it appears that William Lyndsey and Susan his wife for 1440 pounds paid, held of the manor of Tottenham and other lands in Tottenham, Stoe Barshenley, Sonshall, Waden and Wedbarn, at a rent charge of 80 pounds per annum till paid: this estate belongs to the English College at Douai. A deed made relating to a rent charge, by Sir Francis Englefield, of 26 pounds, 18 shillings and 4 pence per annum, out of the rectory and parsonage of Wooten Bassett to Edward Roberts, Gentleman, dated May 1st, 12th of King Charles II., resigned again to St. Francis; with several other writings in two little trunks taken from Mr. Jolly's house in Drury Lane; as also a box of books, a silver hilted sword, and several mathematical instruments, taken likewise from the said Mr. Jolly's house; for which this shall be your warrant.

Given at the Court, at Windsor, July 16, 1686.

SUNDERLAND, P.

To Sir Richard Walcupp, Knight, and

To Richard Graham, Esq., or to either of them.

The storm of persecution having passed away, Catholics began to breathe more freely, and in 1686 we find the Franciscans again holding their Chapter in Somerset House. In the suffrages at the end of the decisions of this Congregation prayers are prescribed as usual, with the addition of "pro Catharina Regina Dotrice, cujus munificentia Regia fuimus refecti."

In 1678 the English Franciscans showed by their energy and expansion that the Province had reached the summit of its glory. They established nine new official residences in various parts of the country, and began to build a friary in true Franciscan style in Lincoln's Inn Fields, with a staff of ten, among whom were seven priests.

The following year, 1688, ten Belgian fathers were called over to England, to help the English Franciscans in the mission work. Their names, beside the five at Lincoln's Inn Fields, were, John Capistran Frans, Mathias Roelhoof, Francis Six, Urban Tanghe and Elias Van Eecke. In October they all took up their places in the various residences to which they had been appointed.

Little did they dream of the wave of destruction which was fast approaching, and would sweep everything before it.

In November the Orange Revolution broke out. The Belgian Fathers had to hurry back home, and many of the English Franciscans also hastened to the continent. So great was the rush to Douai, that there was not room enough for all the fathers who continued to arrive, and the clerics had to be sent out to different Houses of the Order in Belgium.

It was not in England but at Douai that the Chapter of 1689 was held; and it was once more on St. Bonaventure's College that the affections and the efforts of the brethren were centred.

CHAPTER XIII.

AUTHORS.

BEFORE proceeding with the history of the Province, we will give an idea of the literary productions of the English Franciscans.

A glance at the authors and their writings cannot fail to show that if the English Province produced many men of true piety, solid learning was not neglected among them; thus illustrating the text with which the arms of the Franciscan Order are often adorned, "In Sanctitate et Doctrina."

FATHER JOHN GENNINGS wrote the life and martyrdom of his brother, under the title of "The life and death of Mr. Edmund Genings, Priest, crowned with martyrdom at London, the 10th day of November, in the year MDXCI." It was printed at St. Omers, in 1614. He is also the author of "Institutio Missionariorum," Douai, 1651.

FATHER BONAVENTURE JACKSON wrote a book entitled "Manuduction to the Palace of Truth," printed at Mechlin in 1616, in which he points out the way back to the truth to those who have erred.* The work was published under the pseudonym of Richard Britton, (Dodd, vol. ii. p. 421.)

VENERABLE ARTHUR BEL published at Brussels, in * Wadding ad an. 1616.

1624, "A brief instruction how we ought to hear Mass," a translation from the Spanish of Andrew a Soto, dedicated to Anne, Countess of Argyle. Also "The Rule of the Third Order of St. Francis," and in the year 1625, "The history, life and miracles of Joane of the Cross," 8vo, St. Omers. (Dr. Oliver.)

FATHER EGIDIUS or GILES WILLOUGHBY translated into English the golden treatise of St. Peter of Alcantara, "On Mental Prayer." It was published in 1632, and dedicated to Lady Powis. (Dodd.)

FATHER WALTER COLMAN published a poem called "The Duel of Death," which he dedicated to Queen Henrietta Maria, consort of Charles I. He also composed in verse a book on the controversies of the times, and a translation of the Life of St. Angela, of the Third Order of St. Francis. Father Mason says he has not seen the works, and that they were perhaps lost in England, at the time of the author's arrest and imprisonment.

FATHER AUGUSTINE EAST published at Douai, in 1642, the devotional treatise, "The Goad of Divine Love," which is a translation of St. Bonaventure's work, "Stimulus amoris." He dedicated it to Father George Perrot, then Provincial.

VENERABLE HENRY HEATH wrote "Soliloquia, seu Documenta Christianæ Perfectionis," printed at Antwerp in 1652. A translation, "Soliloquies and Documents of Christian Perfection," was published at Douai in 1674; it was reprinted in London in 1844. Another edition of this Latin work was issued at Quaracchi in 1885. The following list of his other

FATHER RICHARD MASON, from whose able pen we have the following works :

Sacrarium privilegiorum quorundam Seraphico P. S. Francisco indultorum. Douai, 1636.

Questionum theologicarum resolutio pariter ac collatio cum sententiis S. Augustini. Douai, 1637.

Regula et Testamentum S. Francisci, with a treatise De Confraternitate Chordæ, and Manuale Tertii Ordinis S. Francisci. These were printed at Douai in Latin, in 1643; but in the same year appeared his translation into English of the said Manual, 12mo, dedicated to the Dowager Lady Elizabeth Rivers.

Manual of the Confraternity of the Cord, 12mo, Douai, 1654, dedicated to Lady Ann Howard.

The Rule of Penance of the Seraphical Father St. Francis, as approved and confirmed by Leo X., in two vols., Douai, 1644. The first is dedicated to Father John Gennings, the second to the Abbess (Margaret Clare West) and Sisters of the Third Order of St. Francis at Nieuport.

Certamen Seraphicum Provinciæ Angliæ. 4to, Douai, 1649. This is his most valuable publication.

According to the catalogue of the library of the British Museum, he was the author of "Apologia pro Scoto-Anglo," 12mo, Douai, 1656; and "Microcosmus," 8vo, Wangen, 1671.

But perhaps his noblest production is a "Liturgical Discourse on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass" in 8vo. It consists of two parts; yet, strange to say, the second part was printed first, in 1669, with appendix and table of contents; the first part appeared in 1670. This most learned and edifying work is dedicated to Henry, the third Lord Arundel, Baron of Wardour (Count of the Holy Roman Empire, and Master of the Horse to the late Queen-mother, Henrietta Maria), whose hereditary devotion to the Holy Sacrifice the author commemorates. In 1675 he published an abridgement of this admirable work.

FATHER JOHN BAPTIST CANES, whose first work was "The Reclaimed Papist," a small 8vo, 1655, dedicated to John Compton, Esq., to whom, it seems, he was chaplain. It is written in the form of a dialogue between a Catholic knight and a Protestant lady.

His "Fiat Lux," or "A general Conduct to a right understanding and charity in the great Combustions and broils about Religion in England," inspires sentiments of moderation and peace. The second edition appeared in 1662, and was dedicated to Elizabeth, Countess of Arundel and Surrey, the mother of Cardinal Howard. This work has an appendix on "Infallibility."

He was also the author of "Diaphanta, or an Exposure of Dr. Stillingfleet's Arguments against the Catholic Religion." Another treatise against Dr. Stillingfleet was published at Bruges, shortly after the author's death, in 1672. (Wood, Dodd.)

FATHER CHRISTOPHER DAVENPORT, whose works were printed in two vols. fol. at Douai, in 1665 and 1667. The following are the contents :

IN VOL. I.

1. Systema fidei, seu tractatus de Concilio Universali.
2. Tractatus de Schismate, speciatim Anglicano.
3. Historia minor Fratrum Minorum almæ Provinciæ Angliæ.
4. Manuale missionariorum, seu Commentatio super nobiliores quæstiones Regulæ S. Francisci ad missionarios spectantes.

IN VOL. II.

1. Apologia Episcoporum.
2. Liber dialogorum, seu Summa Veteris Theologiæ Dialogismis tradita.
3. Problemata scholastica et controversalia speculativa.
4. Opusculum de medio statu animarum.
5. Paralipomena philosophica de Mundo peripatetico.
6. Religio philosophi, seu peripatetica discussio celeberrimi miraculi restauratæ tibie.
7. Epistolum adversus judiciariam astrologiam.

Besides these, we have from him :

1. Supplementum Historiæ Provinciæ Angliæ, in quo est Chronosticon. Douai, 1671.

2. Deus, Natura, Gratia, sive Tractatus de prædestinatione, meritis, peccatorum remissione, et Sanctorum invocatione. Accessit Paraphrastica Expositio articulorum confessionis Anglicanæ, 4to, Lugduni, 1634. This work has the "Placet prælo mandetur" of Father John Gennings, 1633. But, interpreted in its most favourable sense, it pleased neither Catholics nor Protestants. The Spanish Inquisition put it on its Index, and it would probably have been condemned in Rome, if Charles and Laud had not persuaded Panzani, the Papal envoy, to use his influence to stop the prosecution: thus it was possible to go too far, even in a good cause.

He also wrote a Dedicatory Preface to "The Chronicle and Institution of the Order of the Seraphicall Father St. Francis," which had been translated at his request from the French by William Cape (a probet et Catholico viro D. Gulielmo Cape). It was printed at St. Omers in 1618, and dedicated to "the Englishe Poore Clares in Gravelinge."

FATHER NICHOLAS CROSS. The catalogue of the Bodleian Library correctly assigns to him the authorship of "Cynosura; or, a Saving Star which leads to Eternity, being a Paraphrase on the 50th Psalm: Miserere mei Deus," dedicated to the Countess of Shrewsbury. It is a thin folio, printed in London, in 1670. (Dr. Oliver.)

FATHER LAWRENCE A S. EDMUNDO composed a spiritual treatise, the printing of which the Definitory agreed to in the year 1672.

FATHER CHARLES PORA wrote a work in French, having the following title: "L'amour Reglé, par P. Charles Pora, Recolet, dédié à Monseigneur de Barillon, Marquis de Brange, &c." Paris, 1682. It is a small volume of 328 pages.

FATHER BERNARD EYSTON is the author of "The Christian Duty," 4to, printed at Aire in 1684.

FATHER JOHN CROSS, of whom we have the following works:

"Philothea's Pilgrimage to Perfection, described in a Practice of ten days' solitude," 8vo, printed at Bruges, in 1668.

A treatise "De Juramento Fidelitatis."

"An Apology for the Contemplations on the Life and Glory of Holy Mary, the Mother of Jesus," 12mo, London, 1687, dedicated to Queen Mary, Consort of King James II.

A philosophical course of "Dialectica, Logica, Metaphysica, Physica naturalis, Mathematicæ rudimenta universa, ad mentem Doctoris Mariano-Subtilis."

He was also requested by the Chapter, in 1684, to undertake the task of writing the life of Venerable John Wall.

FATHER ANTHONY LE GRAND was the author of "Institutio philosophiæ secundum principia Renati Descartes," London, 1671. Also "Historia Naturæ," a treatise "De carentia Sensus et Cognitionis in Brutis," and "Apologia pro Renato Descartes." (A. Wood, Athenæ Oxon.)

Dodd says that he also published "Historia Sacra," 8vo, and "Missæ Sacrificium neomystis succincte expositum," 12mo, London, 1695.

FATHER JOHN ROOKWOOD published at Douai the lives of three Capuchins: Angelus de Joyeuse, Benedict Cansfield and Archangel Gordon.

FATHER JOHN BAPTIST WESTON composed the able and useful work, "An Abstract of the Doctrine of Jesus Christ; or, the Rule of the Friars Minors, literally, morally, and spiritually expounded," printed at Douai in 1718.

FATHER ANTHONY PARKINSON was requested by the fathers in 1725 to commit to the press his valuable compilation on the History of the Order in England. It was printed in London in 1726 under the title of "Collectanea Anglo-Minoritica; or, a Collection of the Antiquities of the English Franciscans, or Friars Minors." The Appendix contains an account of "The English Nuns of the Order of St. Clare," before the reformation.

The Statutes for the Fathers on the Mission, "Statuta Fratrum Minorum Recollectorum Almæ Provinciæ Angliæ, pro Missione," were printed in 1713, according to a decision of the Chapter held on May 3 of that year. They were reprinted in 1747. The little volume also contains the Rule and Testament of our Holy Father St. Francis, and some prayers.

FATHER GREGORY POWELL published a Manual and Catechism in Welsh. (Dodd.)

FATHER PACIFICUS BAKER. We have from his pen a controversial work, entitled "Scripture Antiquity;" also "Meditations on the Lord's Prayer, from the French;" "The Christian Advent;" "The Sundays kept holy;" "The Devout Christian's Companion for the Holy Days;" "The Devout Communicant;" "The Holy Altar and Sacrifice explained;" "The Lenten Monitor." Without much originality, all these works are remarkable for unction, solidity and moderation. One of his books is an abridgement of Father Mason's "Liturgical Discourse on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass," in the form of a dialogue.

FATHER PHILIP LORAINÉ wrote the work "Pagano-Papista Chimæra Infidelitatis Protestantis," in 1750. (Dodd.)

FATHER FELIX ENGLEFIELD is the reputed author of "The Miraculous Powers of the Church of Christ." The work was published in 1756, without name of either place or author. It is an 8vo of 300 pages, and has for scope the confutation of Dr. Conyers Middleton.

FATHER LEO PILLING wrote: "A Caveat addressed to the Catholics of Worcester against the insinuating Letter of Mr. Wharton," 8vo, London, 1785. Also "A Dialogue between a Protesting Catholic Dissenter and a Catholic, on the Nature, Tendency and Import of the Oath lately offered to the Catholics of England;" and "An Argumentative Letter to the Rev. Joseph Reeve, on his view of the Oath said to be tendered by the Legislature to the Catholics of England." (Dodd.)

We may mention here that leave was granted the English Franciscans by the General Definitory, in the year 1661, to resume the custom, which had existed in the first Province, of instituting Doctors of Divinity. The first who received the title was Father Davenport, the second Father Mason. But at the Chapter of 1692 a resolution was passed "that the title of Doctorship should now cease in our Province."

CHAPTER XIV.

THE NEW CHURCH AT DOUAI. OMINOUS SIGNS.
THE STORM.

THE greatest spiritual conquest of Father Martin Grimston was Sir Henry Fletcher, Baronet, of Hutton, in Cumberland ; for God had chosen him as an instrument to bring about the conversion of this gentleman to the true Faith. And not only did he become a zealous Catholic, but also a most devoted friend to the Order of St. Francis ; and he built at his sole expense the fine new Church of St. Bonaventure at Douai, which obtained a reputation for its architectural beauty.

The first stone of this sacred edifice was laid in October, 1706.* Six years later, on November 13, 1712, it was solemnly dedicated by the Archbishop of Cologne, Prince Joseph Clement, as appears from the following attestation :

On the twenty-sixth Sunday after Pentecost, which was the 13th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1712, by special leave of the Right Rev. Lord Guido, Bishop of Arras, the most Serene and most Reverend Prince Joseph Clement by the Grace of God Archbishop of Cologne, Archchancellor of the Holy Roman Empire, Legate of the Holy Apostolic See, has solemnly and according to the usual rite dedicated at Douai, in the Diocese of Arras, to God Almighty, in memory and under the title of St. Bonaventure Confessor and Doctor, the Church of the English Franciscans; and has also consecrated the high-altar enclosing therein the relics of Saints Urban, Vincent and Gaudentia. He has moreover prescribed that the feast of the anniversary of the dedication shall be observed every year on the Sunday following the feast of St. Martin, Bishop of Tours.

In witness of which he has ordered these letters to be expedited, signed with his own hand, and sealed with his archiepiscopal seal, at Valenciennes, November 18, 1712.

The pious founder did not live to see his glorious work crowned: he had gone to his reward six months before the dedication of the noble temple he had raised to the glory of God.

The church had a nave and side-aisles, extending to the present dome. Both the nave and the aisles were terminated by a semicircular apse. We read in a description of the edifices of Douai that the only fault that could be found with it was that it appeared too short. It is rather the other way now; but the western portion has undergone no alteration, and the organ with its case has never been moved.

After his conversion Sir Henry entirely relinquished all the pleasures and vanities of the world, and took up his abode among the English Franciscans at St. Bonaventure's, Douai, where he passed the remainder of his life. Every day he served Holy Mass in the Church, to the great admiration and edification of the people, who saw him humbly kneeling at the foot of the altar, entirely rapt in God, as if in an ecstasy. He was buried in the sanctuary near the high-altar. His epitaph was inscribed on a marble slab, over the sacristy door, on the gospel side.

Some years later, his spiritual guide and friend, Father Martin Grimston, was laid to rest by his side.

A few incidents in connection with Douai must be mentioned here; not that they are of any consequence, but because we wish to be complete.

In 1730 the Confraternity of St. Dorothy, which had been established long before in the Church of Saint Jacques, was transferred to our church.

In 1761 the Stations of the Cross were erected in our church; but it was decided that the devotions should take place on a day different from that of the Walloon Recollects. The exercise seems afterwards to have been discontinued, for in 1773 it was resolved that the Way of the Cross must be resumed in our church; it must be made some Friday in the month, but with closed doors.

With regard to the House, it was decided in 1732 to rebuild the north side. There was great opposition to this by the neighbouring institute, the "Moulart Seminary," so called after a priest, M. Moulart, the authorities fearing lest the new buildings might interfere with their comfort or pretended rights. It was not until about the year 1747 that this matter was settled to the satisfaction of all the parties concerned.

We have good information as regards the number of English Franciscans in the course of the eighteenth century. In the year 1708 there were forty-two in community at Douai, viz., seventeen priests, one deacon, three subdeacons, five clerics, thirteen lay brothers and three tertiaries.

In 1758 there were forty fathers on the mission in England. The account given to the General Chapter of the "Status Provinciæ" is generally the same: we select that of 1756, which is as follows:

"At Douai in Flanders, we have a friary and college, dedicated to St. Bonaventure, where there is a Guardian, Vicar, Instructor of clerics and novice master, also two professors of theology, one of Holy Scripture and two of philosophy.

"Under the direction of our Province are two convents of English nuns: one of poor Clares at Aire in Artois, where two fathers reside, the Confessor and his assistant, and two lay brothers for the quest. The other convent is at Bruges in Flanders, for Sisters of the Third Order of our holy Father St. Francis, where there are also two fathers, for the service of the Sisters and the boarders.

"In England we have eleven Guardians, elected at the Provincial Chapter, who are truly the local superiors of all our missionaries living in their respective districts.

"Among our fathers six are jubilarians in the Order, and two professors 'emeriti' of theology.

"Since our last relation to the General Chapter, Father Baker, an eminent preacher and zealous missionary in England, has published two pious books.

"The number of brethren in the Province is about one hundred, and of nuns in both convents about eighty."

Then follows a list of deceased brethren, and signatures, dated London, January 16, 1756.

Not long after the middle of the century unmistakable signs of coming events became discernible: the nations of Europe commenced to prepare for the great upheaval, which was to sweep across the continent before its close.

Vexatious laws were initiated by the authorities of the State on the one hand. On the other, the English Franciscans began to experience some difficulty in carrying on the various works in which they were engaged. Perhaps, if we may say so, the spirit of zeal and devotion was declining in England: vocations grew scarce, and the means of support became inadequate. To speak plainly, there was a falling off in men and means; and this would ultimately in all probability without additional cause have sufficed to bring about the fall of the English Franciscan Province.

In 1773 the fathers were confronted with the law of "the most Christian King," forbidding youths to make their religious profession until the age of twenty-one years completed.

In 1779 there were no Franciscan students at Douai to commence their course of theology. For some years back, instead of four professors only three had been appointed.

Already in 1774 the Definitors had agreed that "the Provincial could not go to the General Chapter to be held in Rome, nor the Custos either. He need not for that reason resign his office, as we have no one else to send, owing to the great number of deaths we have had of late years."

The decrease in the number of men necessitated ere long a diminution in the number of residences.

With regard to means, so early as 1761 it had been found necessary to sell some articles of church-plate left by Sir Henry Fletcher; and in 1767 the fathers reluctantly decided on disposing in the same manner of a silver crucifix, a gift of the same benefactor.

In 1779 the want became very great, for the Definitors deliberated whether it would not be well, in the actual need of the Province, especially of Douai College, to have handbills printed explaining the urgency of the case; the fathers on the mission could distribute them, and thus charitable people might be induced to come to their assistance. But although at first the Definitors felt inclined to try the experiment, they ultimately shrank from such a step, and decided that no bills should be printed:—"Nulla formula est conficienda."

The want of men began to make itself more keenly felt in 1785, when at the Chapter meeting the Definitors came to the conclusion that there was sufficient reason for applying the exception to the general rule mentioned in the Statutes, and that Guardians might be re-elected immediately after the expiry of their triennial term of office.

Harassing measures of the State increased the troubles of the Franciscans. The Government of France had framed a code of Constitutions expressly for the Recollects. These the "most Christian King" had been forced to sign, and the Pope, fearing greater evils, had yielded his consent.* The State officials wanted to force these measures upon the English Franciscans, and in 1774 they had to consider the proposition, "Are we bound to accept the General Constitutions of the Recollects of France, approved by the Sovereign Pontiff and the most Christian King?" They hoped to get over the difficulty by answering, "No, for we belong to the Germano-Belgic Nation of the Franciscan Order. As regards our House of Douai, let the Provincial do the best he can."

* The "New Constitutions of the Recollects" were drawn up in September, 1770, at a National Assembly of the Recollects of France, in pursuance of an edict of Louis XV., dated 1768. Pope Clement XIV. approved them on April 3, 1773, and King Louis on May 14 in the same year.—R. P. Hétyot.

But the Government continued drifting on to its doom. In 1790 the French Assembly passed a law prohibiting religious from making vows at all. The Franciscans were now confronted with a measure which threatened them with extinction. With heavy hearts they resolved that the final step would have to be taken, and they would leave their beloved College of St. Bonaventure; but it was arranged that a few of the religious should remain, until expelled by main force.

They were offered a domicile in Flanders, provided they would open a college for Flemish as well as for English students, and abstain from questing, so as not to be burdensome to the people. To these conditions they readily assented, adding that if the choice of a place was left them, they would prefer Bruges.

In that year, 1790, there were only two clerics at Douai.

The civil power showed the temper in which it was, by ordering two lists of English Franciscans to be drawn up.* They are probably complete.

The first contains the names of the religious on the continent.

The Revolution soon broke out. On December 19, 1791, the English Recollects were placed under arrest in their own house. They were :

Lawrence Hawley, Superior.	Alexius Whalley.
John Hart.	Albert Jones.
Pacific Kington.	Lewis Kellery.
Stephen Grafton.	Constantius Henrion.
Augustine Roberts.	Joseph Purcell.

On February 18, 1793, the Administration of the District affixed the seals to the friary ; and on August 8 following the fathers received an order to quit the town of Douai before 5 p.m. the next day.

There was no alternative, they had to go : and not only to go, but to hasten, to hurry, in the midst of the greatest dangers on all sides, from which some escaped only after suffering great distress and even imprisonment. But with God's help they all safely reached Belgian soil, and were directed by the Commissary

General, Aloysius Minne, to the town of Tongres or Tongeren in the diocese of Liége, where they arrived in September. The English Carmelites, of whom Father Columban Ferrers was then Superior, had a residence in this place, which they generously gave up to the Franciscan refugees, who were sixteen in number, viz., seven priests, four clerics and six lay brothers. All was soon arranged with the Bishop of Liége and the Commissary General, and the English Franciscans were allowed to remain there in secular dress, until the storm of the Revolution having abated, "they should be able to return to their friary at Douai."

In November of the same year the Intermediate Chapter was held in London. The House of Tongres was now considered a regular establishment, and a Guardian and professors were appointed for it.

It was thought expedient to convoke the triennial Chapter for the following year, 1794. It was duly celebrated in London on July 31, when a Guardian and professor were again appointed for Tongres. A couple of days later, whilst the Fathers of the Chapter were still engaged in their deliberations, lo! there arrived the brethren from Tongres at the very house. They explained that the French hordes had overrun Belgium, profaning the churches, expelling and ill-treating priests and religious; that they had fled, and, through countless dangers, made their way, as best they could, to London.

CHAPTER XV.

DWINDLING.

IF we consider the troubled state of Europe at the end of the eighteenth century, and the difficulties under which the English Franciscans laboured, we shall not be surprised to hear that after 1794 there was no Chapter until the year 1800. They had, it is true, twice met, but without effecting much. In 1796 they assembled to petition for various dispensations, rendered necessary by the circumstances of the times. Among these they asked leave to hold their Chapters only every four years : this was afterwards refused, but it was probably on the strength of the request that they waited till 1800. In 1799 a meeting was forced upon them by the death of the Provincial, Father Pacificus Nutt : they elected Father Nicholas Knight Vicar Provincial, but no other business was transacted.

The Fathers were awaiting the course of events. They were not without hope of soon being able to return to St. Bonaventure's at Douai. Meanwhile they seemed to be at a loss what to do. They were, however, men of zeal and goodwill ; and had it been possible they would, no doubt, have retrieved the Province, for which object they left no stone unturned, as we shall see.

They began by securing the confirmation of all their privileges, in the circumstances in which they then found themselves in England. Permission was obtained for clerics to be ordained "titulo missionis," and leave was granted to wear the secular dress "more aliorum religiosorum in Anglia, sine habitu regulari incedere." But they had to hold their Chapters at the usual time, and at least five "vocales" were to be present for the elections. The need of a suitable place for a noviciate had not failed to impress itself upon the fathers. They had resolved to apply to Sir Edward Smythe, Bart., Co. Durham, for a domicile at Esh, or Ash,* but nothing came of this. Then they addressed themselves to Mr. Webb Weston of Sarnesfield, but with no better result. Finally they decided to admit novices at Osmotherley.

Nor were friends wanting to give them material assistance. In 1800 they counted among their benefactors Mr. Wright, Mrs. Allam and Mrs. Britten. Mrs. Elizabeth Walgrave had given a donation some time previously ; and Mrs. Wakeman left a legacy for Solihull and Baddesley. In 1803 donations were recorded from Thomas Ryder and Mrs. Scarisbrick. In 1806 Mr. Suffield became a benefactor ; also Cesar Johnson, who left some buildings at Birmingham. To these were added later on the names of Nicholas Selby and others.

But death began to make havoc among the fathers. In 1799 the Provincial, Father Pacificus Nutt, had passed away. In 1800 six more deaths were recorded ; and by 1803 again six fathers had died, among whom were two Definitors.

* A short distance to the east of Esh is Ushaw College.

In 1806 there were still twenty-eight fathers; in 1813 only twenty-one. Father Bernardine Collingridge, Provincial, had been raised to the Episcopal dignity, and was thus lost to the Province.

But the Franciscans struggled on. At the Chapter of 1803 the fathers applauded the resolution that, notwithstanding all the obstacles in the way, the tottering Province should with God's help be preserved. "Conclamatum est a Patribus omnibus capitulariter congregatis, ut posthabitis omnibus obstaculis, Deo adjuvante, Provincia nostra modo collabens præservetur."

This Chapter was held in London; and it was then suggested by the Commissary to send the novices, if any should present themselves, to Wetzlar, a town in Germany near Frankfort. The fathers resolved, however, that they would first try once more to educate them in England, and not send them out of the Province, unless all other means failed. Afterwards they tried at Perthyr.

It could no longer be doubtful that Douai was lost to the English Franciscans. In 1795 the church had served for the meetings of the "Popular Society." In 1797 saltpetre works were put up in it. In 1803 it took the place of the parish-church of St. Jacques, which had been demolished in 1800, and was reconciled on May 28. Finally, long after, in 1852, it was enlarged, the extension covering a great portion of the conventual grounds, and was reconsecrated in 1854, under the new title of "St. Jacques."

The troubles of the times in Europe in the early part of the nineteenth century were such that communication with the General Superiors of the Order had become next to impossible. In these circumstances it was thought expedient to grant faculties to the various provinces to elect Vice-Commissaries, who should have the power of a Commissary General. This arrangement existed in the English Province from 1806 until 1827, and the office was filled at various times by Fathers Stephen Grafton, James Howse, Augustine Roberts, Lawrence Hawley and Francis McDonnell.

In the year 1812 the usual appointment of a Preses to each residence ceased. In the same year leave was obtained to re-elect Definitors immediately after the expiry of their term of office. It was also granted that Definitors who were unable to attend the Chapter, could give their vote in writing or by proxy; but this the fathers declined to accept. In 1814 the recitation of the Divine Office was given up, because of the small number of Religious.

Yet another effort was made in 1818 to open a noviciate in England, this time at Aston. The fathers, finding that means were forthcoming, addressed themselves to the ecclesiastical authorities for their sanction of the scheme.

Bishop Milner sent the following beautiful reply to Father Hawley, ex-provincial :

Wolverhampton, Feb. 13, 1818.

DEAR SIR,

I cannot but approve of your accepting of Mr. Weld's pious offer and establishing your noviciate at Aston; and I pray God to bestow his blessing on it, that it may become a fruitful seminary of worthy labourers in the harvest of the great Master, which, I trust in Him, will be the case, if the genuine spirit of your thrice holy Founder is infused into and preserved in it, such as it was at Douai, when the latter sent the blessed martyr Paul of St. Magdalene on the mission, or even such as it was when I visited the venerable Father James Rogerson in it. This, however, never can be the case, if there be too close a connection between the Religious and our modern gentry, qui omnes quæ sua sunt quærunt et non quæ Jesu Christi. . . .

The new noviciate, commenced under good auspices, did not fulfil the expectations of the Province. Two novices were there in 1823, whom the fathers intended to send to a friary on the continent to make their profession.

In 1826 it was finally decided not to admit any more novices in England, but to send them abroad to be educated; the place ultimately selected was Palestrina, near Rome.

In 1828 the Provincial, Father Ignatius Richards, died prematurely in Rome, whither he had gone on business of the Province; and the novices whom he had sent to Palestrina went away.

In 1829 it was resolved to close the Franciscan school at Baddesley, which had been erected in the previous century.

In 1830 a doubt arose regarding the validity of the vows made by Fathers Hendren and O'Farrell. There was really no ground for this, considering the indult they had obtained. However, Pope Gregory XVI. sent them, in 1832, a "sanatio in omnibus, quantum opus est, quoad præteritum."

The Chapter of 1832 was held at Birmingham in the month of October. The fathers had then no large residence with sufficient accommodation, and they had to find lodgings in the town. Considering that the Chapter was composed of seven members, and that the meetings extended over about a week, it is not surprising that the expenses at the "Stork" Hotel amounted to thirty pounds, ten shillings and sixpence.

At the next Chapter, in 1835, they elected only a Provincial and Custos, and no Definitors, "ob paucitatem fratrum." During the previous year the Provincial had sent some boys to the Benedictine College at Douai, that they might study there, and make their noviceship afterwards in a Franciscan friary in Belgium. He now submitted his scheme to the fathers at the Chapter, and it was unanimously approved. But two years later the following resolution was passed: "It is inexpedient to hold out any hope to the eight young men now at Douai, to be received into our Order and Province." *

In this same year, 1837, also, it was decided to give up jurisdiction over the Franciscan nuns at Taunton. Three years previously the Poor Clares of Aire, who were also under the jurisdiction of the English Franciscans, had become extinct.

Only nine fathers remained in 1838, and all were at the Chapter held that year at Clifton. They elected a Provincial, Father Leo Edgeworth, and two Definitors, Fathers Hendren and McDonnell, adding that the next meeting should be on or before May 1, 1841. But there was to be no further meeting. The General hesitated to confirm Father Edgeworth's election, and in October, 1839, he appointed Father Hendren Commissary. But in December of the same year he suspended the execution of his letters. Meanwhile the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda had taken the matter in hand, and came to a decision in 1840. The result was that in January, 1841, the Vicar Apostolic of the Welsh district, Thomas Joseph Brown, O.S.B., Bishop of Apollonia, intimated to the fathers that, by a Brief from His Holiness, he had been appointed Visitor Apostolic of the Province of English Recollects; and not long after Father Hendren was raised to the Episcopal dignity.

The few scattered Franciscans were left to ponder in retirement over events of past years and over youthful hopes, alas! not realized. But four out of their number were yet spared to see a joyful day; for winter was well nigh passed, and a new spring was at hand: another day was dawning. They lived to welcome their brethren, who hailed from the very shores where their countrymen in the Order had found a home three hundred years before, and to them they handed over the seal of the English Province, as they had received it whilom from the survivors of the first Seraphic Foundation in England.

Old age and other circumstances did not allow of their joining their brethren and seeing the realization of the dream of their youth. But what was then practically impossible will yet be brought about ; and, as they showed themselves worthy members of the Seraphic Order in life, our holy Father St. Francis will acknowledge them with us as his children on the great day.

RESIDENCES.

The places served by the Franciscan Fathers of the second Province may be classified in the following manner :

1. Some may be termed "official residences," to which a Superior, called Preses, was appointed at the Chapter meetings, as is customary in the Order. By the title of Preses given to the fathers, these places will be readily distinguished.

2. Towns or villages, where there was a congregation of Catholics, or a mission, constantly served by a Franciscan father. The appointments to these places were made privately by the Provincial, and no mention was made of them at the Chapters.

3. Houses of noblemen or gentlemen in the country, where a priest resided chiefly for the convenience of the family. Changes naturally occurred in such places from various causes, the fathers being but for a short time in some of them, in others longer.

The same may be said of a certain number of missions, especially in later times.

As residences changed sometimes from one class to another, it has seemed best to let them follow in alphabetical order.

It should not appear surprising if some residences of the third sort were not found here, no mention of them occurring in our records.

ABERGAVENNY, MONMOUTHSHIRE.

(Title :—The Immaculate Conception.)

The beginning of this residence dates from the year 1687. "The house of Abergavenny," says the chronicler, "was given us by Mr. Peter Morgan, made first in trust to Mrs. Mary Roberts, with whom afterwards Mr. Williams (Father Pacificus Williams) having some difficulties, and Mrs. Jane Stubbs, sister to the said Mr. Peter Morgan, being his heir, application was made to her to secure to us the said house; upon which she, the said Jane Stubbs, passed the said house in trust to Mr. Walter Williams of Langfoyst for us; and he afterwards passed it in trust to Mr. Edward Burdet (our Syndic) and Mr. Robert Garter, for the same use Mr. Peter Morgan first intended it."

This house was situated in Frogmore Street.

The chief benefactors to the residence were: Mrs. Gunter, for whom a "De profundis" was to be recited every Sunday evening by the priest and congregation, Mr. Brown, and Mrs. Frances Watkins, for whom some Masses had to be said.

Father Pacificus Williams, junior, was appointed the first Preses in 1687, and continued in that office until the year 1701. He was succeeded by Charles Watkins, 1701-1713; Mathew Pritchard, 1713-1715, when he became Bishop; again Charles Watkins, 1716-1725; Lewis Lewis, 1725; Charles Watkins, 1726-1738; Leo Barker, 1738-1739; Gregory Powell, 1740-1755; Anselm Copley, 1755; Gregory Powell, 1764-1767; Alexius Whalley, 1767-1770; Andrew Weetman, 1770-1773; Augustine Hickins, 1773; Angelus Ingram,

In 1793 a sum of money left by Mr. Weld was, according to his intention, spent on the building, as also sixty pounds left by Mr. Jones, and one hundred pounds left by Miss Prodger.

Father Gregory Watkins was appointed Preses in 1794; Thomas Cottrell, 1800-1803; Gregory Watkins, 1803-1805; Peter Jones, 1805; Stephen Grafton, 1806-1808; Gregory Watkins in 1808-1809.

This was the last appointment of a Preses, and the place ceased to be an official residence. But the fathers continued to live there for a long time after, and there also the Chapter meeting was held in 1835.

Father Stephen Grafton died there on December 23, 1847.

ASTON

(near Stone, Staffordshire).

When the Franciscans, as well as other priests and religious, had been expelled from Douai by the French revolutionists, they saw the necessity of making arrangements for their novices, and various means were tried to this end. Finally in 1818 it was decided to sell the ground at Garway, and establish the noviciate-house at Aston. They readily obtained Bishop Milner's consent, who encouraged them in their efforts to continue the Franciscan Province.

In 1821 it was called "Aston friary" (Conventus Astoniensis). The noviciate was then established there, and Father Stephen Grafton was novice master. In 1823 there were two novices. But no further appointment was made; and "Aston Hall" soon ceased to have an official existence.

BADDESLEY, WARWICKSHIRE.

Father Henry Bishop, who came on the English mission from Douai in 1756, was the founder of this residence, and was living here in 1758. It was also here that he closed his laborious career in 1811. We find in the archives "an inventory of the goods belonging to the Chapel of Our Blessed Lady at Badesley Green, July 11, 1776."

The great benefactor and patron of the place was Mr. Ferrers. He also allowed the father his board, and running of a horse. In return he received the spiritual blessings of numerous Masses for himself and relatives.

The Franciscan school of Edgbaston was transferred to Baddesley at the end of 1789. The following year, 1790, it was in full working order. In 1800 some regulations were drawn up by the fathers assembled in Chapter for the good government of the school.

Five times the Franciscan Chapter was held here: in 1808, 1811, 1814, 1817, and 1820.

In 1824 the fathers received a legacy of two thousand pounds for the maintenance of three boys at the school from Mrs. Mary Frith. In return they had to say two Masses for the repose of the soul of George William Frith on his anniversary, July 5; one to be said here, the other at Aston.

But notwithstanding all the efforts of the fathers the school was not destined to last, and in the year 1829 they came to the conclusion that it should be closed.

BECKFORD, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

This place is mentioned in the year 1758 by Father Felix Englefield, then Provincial. Mr. Wakeman was the patron. In the above named year Father Lawrence Robinson resided here.

BEOLEY, WORCESTERSHIRE,

Beoley lies on the borders of Warwickshire, two miles from Redditch. We find but one Franciscan whose name is mentioned in connection with this place: it is Father John Wheeler, who resided here in the year 1771.

BIRMINGHAM AND EDGEASTON.

At the Chapter meeting of 1687, held at the residence of the Provincial, Father John Cross, in London, the erection of nine new residences, projected in the course of that year, was approved. The seventh on the list of these new residences was Birmingham. Father Leo Randolph, a man of experience, for he had already been thirty years on the mission, was selected as the first Preses. He commenced that same year the building of St. Mary Magdalen's Chapel, the plans of which were approved in November: it was called after his own name in religion "a S. Magdalena." The following year, 1688, he obtained an assistant priest. Father Urban Tanghe, one of the ten Belgian Recollects who had recently come over to share the labours of their brethren on the English mission, was sent to help him.

In the same year 1688 it was also decided to transfer the Franciscan noviciate hither from Lincoln's Inn Fields as soon as possible; and accommodation was to be provided in the building accordingly. One hundred pounds previously given as alms by Sir Hercules Underhill were devoted to this object; and the incumbent was to say a yearly Mass for the repose of his soul.

But not long afterwards the chapel and residence were entirely destroyed by the mob. The spot being in a very exposed position, it was thought desirable to sell the ground. This, however, seems to have been a matter of some difficulty; and it was only done after Father Leo Randolph's death by Father Grimston, who obtained thirty pounds for it.

After the untoward event Father Randolph lost no time in looking for another site; and it seems that he was not long in finding one at Edgbaston. For shortly after his death Father Bonaventure Parry, then Provincial, wrote: "The present incumbent, Mr. Anthony Parkinson, can give an account of all Mr. Randolph's books, papers and church-stuff, at Edgbaston."

After Father Leo Randolph, the office of Preses was filled by Philip Sadler, 1698-1701; Anthony Parkinson, 1701-1710; Philip Sadler, 1710; Anthony Lambert,

The first direct mention of the Edgbaston school occurs about this time: it is in connection with the accounts of the year 1727. It is also mentioned that in 1730 Father Bernard Parker was teaching there.

But from a note written more than thirty years later, it is certain that the school had then already been some years in existence. For it says that "about the beginning of the school, Lady Curson greatly helped towards the establishing of it" by her generosity. Now this Lady Anne Curson of Waterperry made two bequests, in consideration of which the fathers had to say four weekly Masses. The first bequest was made in 1719, the other in 1722. This makes it appear certain that the beginning of the school dates from Father Holmes' term of office; and a commencement was probably made about the year 1720. Another note which speaks of an agreement between Father Holmes and the Provincial, confirms this conclusion.

In 1731, at the Chapter meeting, the fathers decided that "as our school in Warwickshire has to contend with many difficulties, we leave everything regarding it to the prudent disposition of the Provincial" (Father John Capistran Eyston).

The school and mission always remained two distinct concerns. Among the regulations drawn up in 1735, the first provides that the incumbent shall pay to the master of the school sixteen pounds per annum for his board, etc.

In 1740 Father Alexius Martin, who was then teaching, was recalled from the school. He had been incumbent before. If other changes were judged expedient in that year, they were left in the hands of the Provincial.

In 1747 it was decided that the incumbent alone must have the care of income and expenditure; and twice a year, viz., about the feast of the Annunciation of our Blessed Lady, and that of St. Michael, he shall give an account to the master of the school and the Guardian of the district. The account to be duly signed, and forwarded to the Provincial.

A new house was to be rented in 1750 for the school, and forty pounds were allowed for alterations and additions. The following letter of Father Baker, then Procurator of the Province, contains some interesting details. It is addressed to Father George Lancaster.

SIR,

The affair of changing the house at Edgbaston, and going to Mr. Ran's, has been considered, and consented to, on the following conditions:

1. That Mr. Holmes allows forty pounds and no more, towards the expenses of the building and alterations to be made. The rest of the expense to be paid by the Congregation and those who desire the change; for no after changes will be answered for here.

2. That the plan sent by Mr. White be followed, and no alterations made in it that may make the expenses greater than what has been given in, viz., sixty-five pounds. At least that no more be demanded here, than the forty pounds given and allowed towards it.

3. That a lease be taken for twenty-one years, with power on our side to quit the house, and give up the lease at the expiration of 5, 10, 15, or 21 years, but we not to be turned out, if we choose to stay, till the expiration of the lease.

4. The lease to be made in the name of some honest, substantial Catholic in Birmingham, the person left to you, who are best acquainted with them ; and to your judgment it is left to manage the affair. The forty pounds will be remitted to you ; and Mr. Holmes desires you will be so good as to take the trouble of managing it, and inspecting the buildings that are to be made.

In your last to me, you say the project will be very commodious ; but in your thoughts a great many blocks are in the way. Had you mentioned them, they would have been considered on here. But not naming them, it must be left to your prudence and judgment to remove them as well as you can. As for any security for the money we lay out, I don't see any we can have, unless Mr. Ran will oblige himself to refund all or part of what we lay out on his house, in case by mob, or other forcible means we be driven away before the expiration of five years of the lease. If he will not do this, we must run the hazard, and trust to Providence, our only security ; and if turned out, sit down by the loss.

Another difficulty we apprehend here is, whether there will not be danger of making a talk in the country, and of making our persons' landlord an enemy to us by quitting his house, and for which, I suppose, he must have a quarter's warning. You may see by this that Mr. Holmes and his Council readily come into the proposed change, as far as they can contribute towards it; but leave the management of the difficulties to you, to get over them. And if you can make all things easy, you may treat and conclude with Mr. Ran as soon as ever you please. But this must be done by you, for Mr. Holmes does not think it proper to let Mr. White, or Mr. Brown either, have the management, as being young and inexperienced in these affairs. If you have any objections to what I have sent you in Mr. Holmes' name, you'll let him know by letter, and he will further consider of them.

As to repairs, it is left to you to make the agreement with Mr. Ran, as you shall judge most proper, though we decide the landlord ought to be at the expense of those which are absolutely necessary. By repairs here we mean that the stable and out-buildings, as well as the dwelling house, be in good and tenable repair when we enter upon the premises, as we shall be obliged to leave them in a tenable condition whenever we quit them. As for repairs while we inhabit the house as before said, what is necessary to keep it sarta tecta, sound against wind and weather, that the landlord be obliged to do, or allow it in his rent.

As Mr. White tells me in his letter, the landlord is to pay all taxes and poor rates and other levies by the Parish, we expect that nothing of this kind be incumbent upon us, but altogether be paid by the landlord.

I am, etc.,

P. BAKER.

January 27, 1749-1750.

A regulation was made in 1766, to the effect that the incumbent's authority should extend also to the professors and the direction of the school.

In 1782 Mrs. Mary Weld left three hundred and fifty pounds to the school, for the education of a boy not under twelve years old, afterwards to be sent to our college at Douai. Mrs. Ann Monington left two hundred and fifty pounds for a like object.

In 1784 Sir James Brockholes, Knight, of Lancashire, bequeathed four hundred pounds to the fathers, which were applied to the school. Some Masses and Offices of the dead were to be celebrated for the repose of his soul.

In 1788 the school appears still to have been in its usual working order, and is mentioned in the accustomed manner. But it was transferred to Baddesley, probably the following year.

Having traced the vicissitudes of the Edgbaston school, we must now resume the relation of matters connected with the mission.

Among the chief benefactors, who contributed towards the maintenance of the incumbent, were Mr. Ferrers, Sir Hercules Underhill, Mr. Mense, Mr. Ralph Bucknall, Mr. Jackson, Mr. Sparrows of Barton Park, Mr. Savage of Stafford, and Mr. Powell.

Father George Lancaster was succeeded in 1728 by Bernard Parker. He was followed in 1731 by Lawrence Loraine. Then again George Lancaster, 1732-1734 ; Alexius Martin, 1734-1737 ; George Lancaster, 1737-1741 ; Robert Painter, 1741-1746 ; Bernard Yates, 1746-1749 ; Bernardine Carruthers, 1749-1752; Anselm White, 1752-1755; Bernardine Carruthers, 1755-1758; Anselm White, 1758-1761; Thomas Dixon, 1761-1764; Bernard Barker, 1764-1767; Charles Juliaens, 1767-1770; Athanasius Baynham, 1770; Pacificus Nutt, 1771-1773; Henry Bishop, 1773-1776; James Howse, 1776-1779; Charles Juliaens, 1779-1781; James Howse, 1781; Bonaventure Pilling, 1782-1785. During his term of office, on May 6, 1783, St. Peter's Chapel was opened. Then followed James Howse, 1785-1787; Pacificus Nutt, 1787; he was then Provincial.

Whilst he held the post of Preses, in 1791, Mrs. Johnson bequeathed two hundred pounds for the support of the incumbent at our chapel in Birmingham. Her name, and that of her husband John, were put down among the special benefactors.

The next Preses, Augustine Kemble, was appointed in 1800; Constantius Henrion in 1803; Henry Bishop in 1805; Ignatius Casemore in 1806; Henry Bishop in 1808; Augustine Roberts in 1809; continued in 1811. He was the last Preses.

In 1821 the mission of Birmingham received one half, i.e., one hundred pounds, of the legacy of William and Elizabeth Lewin, for which one Mass was to be said every three weeks. The other half was for the mission of Solihull.

It only remains to add that although Birmingham had ceased to be an official residence, the Franciscans had the care of the mission for a long time after. And six times the Chapter meeting was held here: in 1821, 1823, 1824, 1827, 1830 and 1832.

BRAMBRIDGE, HAMPSHIRE.

The patron of this residence was Mr. Wells. Father Gregory Martin was here in 1758, as we find in the writings of Father Felix Englefield.

BRANSFORD.

At the Provincial Chapter held in the year 1665, it was decided to send Father Lewis of Nazareth to serve this residence.

BRISTOL.

Although from the year 1647 there was a titular Guardian of Bristol, it never was an official residence. But some of our fathers served there on the mission in the nineteenth century.

Father Edgeworth began his labours at Bristol in the spring of 1825; and Father O'Farrell followed him thither on December 24, 1830. To meet the rapid increase of Catholicity, Father Edgeworth purchased, in the spring of 1831, a large plot of ground at Clifton for the erection of a spacious church. The ground was first broken on August 11, 1834, and on October 4, the feast of St. Francis, the foundation stone was laid. Within the area purchased he erected a small chapel in honour of St. Augustine, where Mass was first said in 1842. The church was opened six years later, in 1848; Father Edgeworth had then retired to Antwerp.

Father O'Farrell was first attached to St. Joseph's Chapel in Trenchard Street, where he laboured with the zeal of an Apostle. Afterwards he contrived to purchase the well built and graceful church of the Irvingites, now St. Mary's on the Quay. It was solemnly dedicated by Bishop Baines on July 5, 1843, and Father O'Farrell was installed the first incumbent. He continued to minister there many years.

It must be added that the Chapter meeting of 1838, which was the last of the second Province, was held at Clifton.

BURTON.

This place was at one time served by the Franciscan fathers, for we find in 1773 the following entry :

"Mr. Ingram (Father Angelus Ingram), as incumbent of Burton, receives from Healy's annuity ten pounds per annum. And from the Carpue's family at half yearly payments one pound eleven shillings and sixpence."

There are many places called Burton, and sufficient evidence is not forthcoming to show which is intended. It would seem, however, that it was in Yorkshire.

CANTERBURY.

At a Definitorial meeting held under the presidency of the Provincial, Father John Cross, July 15, 1686, the following question was put: "What use shall we make of the nine hundred pounds, now in the hands of Lord Widdrington?" This gentleman* acted at that time as Syndic or agent to the Franciscans. The reply was that the sum in question should be devoted to the recovery of the site of the old Franciscan friary at Canterbury. From this it would appear very probable that we had a residence in that city. At all events it was undoubtedly contemplated.

CHEESEBURN GRANGE, NEWCASTLE.

At the end of the eighteenth century this place was in the hands of R. Riddle, Esq.

After the breaking up of the community at Tongres, Father Joseph Tate, who had been Guardian there, resided here for some time, between 1794 and 1800.

Father Bernardine Fleet also lived here at the beginning of the nineteenth century.

CHIPPING, LANCASHIRE.

The project of securing a priest for the service of this locality originated with Paschal Howlden, a lay brother, who died at Douai in 1729. The details are found in the following entry, made in 1704 :

Howlden's Fund for a Missioner.

Brother Paschal Howlden, before his holy profession put out a sum of money, as I take, about one hundred and fifty pounds, to raise a little fund of about seven or eight pounds a year, for a missioner of ours, to serve the poor in the parishes of Laithgrim [Leagram] and Chipping, in the county of Lancaster. His brother John Howlden being trustee, who promises to pay it honestly. And for this the incumbent is desired and required to say ten Masses yearly, viz., three for their father, three for their mother, two for their brother, and two for their sister.

The fathers residing at White Hill had to serve Chipping, as appears from the will of Cuthbert Hesketh, in 1710.

COCKPIT HOLE, BUCKINGHAMSHIRE.

The Franciscans must have had a residence in this locality, for in 1767 it was proposed to build a new house here.

EAST HENDRED, BERKSHIRE.

Father Pacificus Price was chaplain to the Eyston family in 1687. A century later, about the year 1788, Father John Evangelist Anderton resided here. His address was, "At B. Eyston's Esq., Hendred, near Abingdon."

An entry made about the year 1703 seems to find its proper place here. "Mr. William and Mr. John Eyston's concerns are in Mr. Charles Eyston their good worthy brother's hands."

The following interesting account is taken from the manuscript of the late Charles John Eyston, of Hendred, Berks. It relates to St. Amand's Chapel.

My Father, George Eyston, Esq., began the Repaire of this Chappell on Wednesday in Easter Weeke, in y<sup>e</sup> yeare 1687 wh<sup>ch</sup> happened to be that yeare on the 30th of March, and it was completely finished on the 17th of September y<sup>t</sup> yeare, one Andrew Bartlet painted and gilded it, and had 42 pounds for doing it as appears yet by his Bill and Acquittance w<sup>ch</sup> are to be found amongst the Papers w<sup>ch</sup> belong to the Chappell.

Saturday, September 24, 1687, Father Pacificus alias Philip Price (who then lived in the Family), a Franciscan Fryer, and one who afterwards was twice Provincial of his Order blessed the Altar Stone,* being assisted by Father Francis alias W<sup>m</sup> Hardwick, Father John Baptist alias W<sup>m</sup> Weston, two of the same order, after that was done Vespers were said with as much solemnity as the place would allow. The day following being Sunday the 25th of September, there were seaven Priests who said Mass in it. The Priests were Mr. Price, who said the first, Mr. Prosser and Mr. Evans, two clergy priests, Mr. Francis Hildesley, Soc. Jesu, Mr. Anthony alias Francis Young, Mr. Weston above mentioned and Mr. Hardwick, the three last were Franciscan Fryers. The company who were at the opening of the Chappell were Sir Henry More of Fawley and his Family, Sir John Courson and his first Lady, Mr. John Massey, actually then Deane of Christ Church in Oxon, Mr. Robert Charnack, and one Mr. John Augustine Bernard, the former Fellow of Maudeline College, and the latter Fellow of Brazen Nose College in Oxford. Mrs. Perkins of Ufton, Mr. Perkins of Beenham, Mr. Hildesley of Little Stoke and his brother Martin, Mr. Francis Hide, jun. of Pangborn, father to the present

* Among the "Facultates pro Missionariis nostris ad Beneficium R. A. P. Ministri concedendæ," the 6th is, "Consecrandi calices, patenas, altaria portatilia, et alia vestimenta ad SS. Eucharistiam celebrandam necessaria." (Copy of 1704.)

Mr. Hide, and some other Catholic gentlemen came hither for the service in the morning. But only Sir John Curson and his Lady and my Uncle Ber. Winchcomb and his first wife were at the consecration of the Altar Stone the day before. And the year following there were meanes found to have both the altar and the Chappell privileged as may be seen by the Bulls which are amongst the writings which relate to the chappell. From the time of its being opened till the Prince of Orange came in and invaded the nation the Chappell was open to all comers and goers. The Blessed Sacrament constantly kept with a lamp burning; mass dayly celebrated in it. But when he and his army passed over the Golden Myle some loose Fellows (whether by orders or not I cannot tell) came hyther went into the Chappell pretended to mock the Priest by supping out of his Chalice, which they would have taken away had it been silver, as they themselves afterwards gave out; however, having torn down the JESUS MARIA from the altar, which holy names were printed upon Pannells in the same frames where the JESUS MARIA are now wrought in Bugles, they retired takinge an old suite of Church stuffe with them to Oxford, where they drest up a manikin with it, and set it up there on the Topp of a Bon-Fyer. This happened on Monday, December 11th, 1688, and this is all the mischief they then did, besides breakeing the lamp and carrying away the Sanctus Bell. Mass from y<sup>t</sup> day ceast there until Monday, June 24th, 1689, when Mr. Weston above mentioned by accident fortund to bee here and then he sayd

Mass in it againe and from that time till now i.e. Aug. 1718 wee have generally used it.

FALMOUTH.

This mission was founded by the charitable Rowland Conyers, Esq., who departed this life on April 28, 1803.

Bishop Sharrock, Vicar Apostolic of the Western District, secured the services of Father Ignatius Casemore as first incumbent. He arrived in January, 1805, and continued to serve this mission for over thirteen years.

FAWLEY AND WHATCOMBE, BERKSHIRE.

Mr. Edmund Young settled eight pounds a year for a Franciscan missionary to serve the poor in these parts of Berkshire after the death of his brother, Father Anthony Young, a S. Francisco, who acquainted Father Price, then Provincial, with it, in a letter dated November 20, 1695.

Two legacies are chronicled in 1791 for the support of the Franciscan missionary in the Fawley district: Mr. T. Moore bequeathed seven hundred pounds, and Mrs. Young four hundred pounds.

Father Nicholas Knight served Whatcombe and Fawley in 1775; he resided at Miss Young's, Whatcombe House.

In 1810 it is again stated that the incumbent has for some time resided at Whatcombe.

GARWAY, MONMOUTHSHIRE.

We read in the records, about the year 1704, that "Mr. Thomas Williams of Garway, gave us the estate of Garway, as appears by his declaration, towards building a house in those parts, or meanwhile maintain a missioner thereabouts ; and passed it by will in trust to Robert Grimond, who being dead, his heirs and executors are content to dispose of it as we think fit, either by sale or otherwise, provided security be given for our faithful performing the said Thomas Williams' will. Mr. Hancock [Father Alexius Hancock] has undertaken for the present to manage the concerns relating to this house."

In 1735 the fathers considered that it would be well to sell the residence of Garway Hill, and devote the price to the maintenance of one or more missionaries in those parts, until with the help of God another residence could be procured, and the pious intentions of our benefactors further fulfilled.

The Father who served "the Garway Hills" was not bound to any particular residence. Father Felix Englefield, writing in 1758, says that the priest used to live at Hilson ; but at that time Mr. Lorymer allowed him his board, and he resided at Perthyre.

The incumbent here also served Broad Oak, Ross, for which he received three pounds yearly.

Mr. Martin Turner's fund for an English Franciscan serving in Monmouthshire was applied to this place.

In 1818 it was finally decided to dispose of the Garway estate and to hand over the proceeds to the Preses at Aston, where the noviciate was then being established.

GREENWICH.

✓ It appears that in the year 1634 we had a residence in the house of the only Catholic gentleman in the town. The Provincial Chapter met in that house in the above mentioned year: and this was the second Chapter of the second Province held in England, the first having been held in London in 1632.

GRIMOLDBY GRANGE, LINCOLNSHIRE.

This place is mentioned in 1782 as being at that time served by a Franciscan Recollect.

GROVE PARK, WARWICKSHIRE.

Father George Lancaster resided here in 1730.

It was decided in 1742 that the incumbent of Grove Park must say one Mass weekly for the repose of the soul of Lady Anne Curson, so long as he receives the alms.

In 1758 Father Arnold resided here.

The patron of the living was H. J. Dormer.

(Title :—St. Thomas.)

✓ The residence of Hereford dates from the year 1684, when Father Pacificus Williams, then Definitor, was appointed Preses. He was succeeded by Alexius Hancock, who was there from 1686 until 1719, performing his duties all those years with great zeal.

Father Michael Hawarden was sent in 1688 as assistant.

In 1696 it was decided to sell or otherwise dispose of the house at Hereford; and to place the proceeds in the hands of a Syndic or other trustworthy friend, until another house could be obtained, more suitable for the use of the Province.

Two years later, in 1698, it was resolved to sell the house to Mrs. Agnes Brett. It was not long ere the sale was concluded, for Father Bonaventure Parry, Provincial, says in a note:

"The residence house and grounds at Hereford are sold and alienated: belonging now to Mrs. Agnes Brett, who nevertheless is to make good to us the sum of one hundred pounds, which Mr. Alexius Hancock lately laid down for repairing the said house, with Superiors' leave. The articles of agreement between Mr. Hancock and the said Agnes Brett, are in Mr. Hancock's hands. Thus stood things when I made my visit here in August, 1702."

Father Hancock was succeeded as Preses by:

John Baptist Gibson, 1719-1728; Michael Hawarden, 1728-1731; John Baptist Gibson, 1731; Michael Hawarden, 1732-1734; John Baptist Beaumont, 1734; Athanasius Chapman, 1735-1741; Alexius Martin, 1741-1752; Augustine Hickins, 1752-1755; Alexius Martin, 1755; Augustine Hickins, 1756-1758; Thomas Eccles, 1758-1764; Nicholas Knight, 1764-1767; Bernard Barker, 1767-1773; George Lancaster, 1773-1776; Andrew Weetman, 1776-1778; Henry Waring, 1778; John Anderton, 1779-1781; Henry Waring, 1781; Alexius Whalley, 1782-1784; Lawrence Hawley, 1784; Leo Pilling, 1785-1787; Leo Haddon, 1787; Andrew Weetman, 1788-1790; Paschal Harrison, 1790; Leo Haddon, 1791-1794; Thomas Cottrell, 1794-1800; Andrew Weetman, 1800-1803; Leo Sumner, 1803-1805; Ignatius Casemore, 1805; Gregory Watkins, 1806-1808; Andrew Weetman, 1808; Lawrence Hawley was appointed in 1809, and continued in 1811.

This was the last appointment.

HEXHAM.

(Title.—St. Anthony of Padua.)

✓ This was the second on the list of the nine residences begun in 1687. We have the following details from Father Bonaventure Parry's writings:

"At Hexham in Northumberland we have a residence, the ground of which was given, as I take it, by Mr. Ben. Carr, of the said town: of which, and what belongs to it, Mr. Constantine Jackson can give best account."

After him the appointments cease.

HIGHDEN, SUSSEX.

Highden, now called Highdown, is in the neighbourhood of West Grinstead. In 1758 Father Placid Payne was at Highden, and another Franciscan, Father Houghton, was at West Grinstead. But "Houghton" is an alias, and it is uncertain what his real name was.

The patron of both Highden and West Grinstead was Mr. Caryl.

HOAR CROSS, IN YOXHALL PARISH, STAFFORDSHIRE.

This residence is mentioned by Father Felix Englefield in 1758, when Father Anselm Copley was living there.

The patron of the place was Mr. Talbot.

HOLT, LEICESTERSHIRE.

We find what follows chronicled concerning this place in 1704, by Father Bonaventure Parry: "In Leicestershire, at Mr. Byerley's near Leicester, there are Mr. Gervais Cartwright's books, which I recommended to Mr. Augustine Hickins, either to be sold, or brought to Mr. Neville's of Holt, where the said Mr. Hickins at present resides."

---

HOLYWELL, FLINTSHIRE.

(Title :—St. Winifred.)

This was one of the residences which the Franciscans resolved to found in the year 1687; it was the fourth on the list.

Father Michael Russell was appointed Preses.

About the year 1704 Father Bonaventure Parry wrote: "We had a residence in King James's days at Holywell in Flintshire; but nothing of it now remains."

HORTON, GLOUCESTERSHIRE.

Father Felix Englefield resided here in 1757, when he was Provincial. One of his letters is dated: "Datum in nostra residentia de Horton, hac die 20 Martii, an. 1757."

He was still there the following year.

Mr. Paston was the patron of the place.

IDSWORTH, HAMPSHIRE.

This residence is mentioned in 1758, when Father Thomas Holmes was here.

LEE HOUSE, LANCASHIRE.

The residence of Lee House in Thornley was founded in 1738, when the Chapter accepted the conditions proposed by Thomas Eccles of Thornley for a resident missionary in his house.

Father Germanus Holmes, Confessor of the Faith, is said to have served the mission here some time from White Hill, when he resided in that place.

Father Leo Francis was here in 1758.

The obligations of the incumbent at Lee House were :
To say one Mass every Sunday in perpetuity.

Three Masses yearly, viz., one for Francis Eccles, one for his father and one for his mother.

LEOMINSTER, HEREFORDSHIRE.

(Title :—The Holy Trinity.)

At Leominster, or Lemster, a residence was founded with the approval of the Chapter in 1687 ; and Father Felix Price was appointed Preses. He filled the office for five or six years.

The following entry of Father Bonaventure Parry will tell us what became of it.

Lemster Residence.

In Mr. John Cross's time there was a little sort of residence established at Leominster, by the industry and endeavours of Mr. Felix Price : which soon after, in the Revolution, was entirely demolished.

LLANARTH, MONMOUTHSHIRE.

Father Samuel Fisher, called in religion Bonaventure, served this mission for many years, from 1835 until 1865. He continued to reside here two or three years longer, and then retired to Pontypool.

LONDON.

✓ There have been Franciscans in London from the beginning of the second Province. Either the Provincial or his Commissary for England resided here, and also the titular Guardian of London; and to one of these the fathers had to report themselves upon their arrival in England. As early as 1632 a Chapter meeting was held here; and from the year 1637 the Chapter assembled here almost regularly. The meeting place in 1671 was "The Royal Friary of our Holy Father St. Francis, of the Reverend Fathers of Arabida." At this place the fathers often met afterwards. In 1672 it is designated as "Somerset House;" in 1674 again as "the Royal Friary of the Reverend Franciscan Fathers of Arabida;" in 1677 as "Somerset Palace, the residence of her most serene Highness, the Queen of England." In 1678 the Chapter assembled "in London, at the beginning of the great persecution;" in 1686 again "at the Royal Friary of the Franciscan Fathers of Arabida, in Somerset House."

In 1655 two fathers, Adam Batten and Ambrose Bevans, were appointed exclusively for the purpose of catechising children in London, either at their homes, or at the father's residence.

In 1656 Father Anthony Le Grand was appointed Vicar or assistant to the titular Guardian of London.

He was also made professor of philosophy here ; and Father Adam Batten was appointed assistant professor in 1657.

In 1686 it was resolved to open a school of classics at Putney, under the presidency of Doctor Slaughter, and the fathers were advised to send to that school youths whom they considered fit pupils.

Towards the end of the same year the fathers deliberated whether the school should be continued, and it was decided that they should use their utmost endeavours to keep it on. But before long a far more important step was to be taken.

In November, 1687, it was resolved to acquire the spot near the arches in Lincoln's Inn Fields, lately in the possession of the Countess of Bath, on the conditions formulated by Edward Burdet, our Syndic. The fathers were directed to ask contributions of their friends towards the erection of the conventual buildings and chapel, under the title of our Holy Father St. Francis.

Lincoln's Inn

The foundation was begun without delay: the Superior and members of the community were selected, and the religious exercises arranged, even as regards lesser details. Father Peter a S. Maria was appointed Preses. The others were: Father Alban Ayrey, Vicar; Father Angelus Bix, preacher; Father Francis Hardwick, visitor of the sick; Father Paul Atkinson, prefect of the choir and catechist; Father Angelus Fortescue, preacher; Father William Lockier, preacher; Michael Hawarden, cleric; Henry Moore, lay brother, and Peter Lalor, lay brother. It was decided that the Religious should wear the Franciscan habit, and sandals, according to custom as regards shape and colour; that is, they should wear brown, not grey habits. Sermons were to be preached on Sundays, and catechism was to be given twice in the week. A course of philosophy was also inaugurated. The Little Hours were to be recited at seven o'clock in the morning, after which the antiphon "Hæc est præclarum vas" was to be sung, except on Sundays and feasts, when this was to be done after High Mass.

On the occasion of the opening a gentleman, Mr. Sadler, presented a fair large silver chalice, a pair of silver cruets and a silver basin to the chapel at Lincoln's Inn Fields, on condition, however, that they should be returned to him in case the chapel were given up.*

Noviciate In the following year, 1688, the noviciate was opened here, with Father Paul Atkinson as novice master, and three novices. The staff had increased to nineteen and was composed as follows:

Father Peter a S. Maria, Preses; Father Felhoen, professor of theology; Father Angelus Bix, titular Guardian of Canterbury; Father Francis Hardwick, Vicar; Father Francis Six; four Belgian fathers (PP. Brabantini); Father Paul Atkinson; Father Angelus Fortescue; Father William Lockier; Father John Capistran Frans; three novices; two lay brothers;

* The chalice and cruets mentioned above were reclaimed and handed over to him after the destruction of the place. But he bequeathed them to his son Philip, one of the English Franciscans; and after his death they were given back to the fathers, and sent to Douai.

Brother Cuthbert, tertiary, to be incorporated. This took place in the month of October.

But man proposes and God disposes. On November 4 of the same year the Prince of Orange landed with a powerful army on the Devonshire coast. That same day, which was the 22nd Sunday after Pentecost, crowds of people attacked our residence with great violence, and tried on that, and also the following day, until midnight, to destroy both the old and the new chapel, together with the house, and to expel the Religious. But the fathers were protected by soldiers and horse sent by King James.

These were days of great danger and anxiety. November 14 was approaching: that was the birthday of Queen Elizabeth. It had been arranged that on that day the Prince of Wales should be taken to Portsmouth, and thence, if necessary, to France, whilst the King should go to Salisbury, and place himself at the head of the army. Knowing that in these circumstances he could not keep us safe from the mob, which appeared determined to destroy the place, His Majesty commanded Bishop Leyburn to intimate his will to us. This he did by sending a note, which we give textually.

FOR MR. CROSSE.

Verie Rd. Father,

I am comanded by the King to lett you know, that since the rabble hath already been very insolent and troublesome to you, atte your residence in Lincolns-inne-fields, and is like to be more hereafter; it is his Majesty's desire and pleasure, that for the prevention of future dangers and inconveniences, you with the rest of your fathers retire from that place.

I am, Verie Rd Father,

Your most affectionate servant,

LEYBURN.

In pursuance of this order, the Franciscans withdrew from the place on November 16, having first removed their goods and obtained a guard of soldiers from the King for the security of the house and chapel.

What happened afterwards may be gathered from a note made a few years later.

"The London residence house was by the arches in Lincoln's Inn Fields, where there was a very decent chapel and convenient lodging rooms. But before we had enjoyed it long, the Revolution coming on, it was plundered and gutted by the mob. But three or four years after, being repaired by the Syndic at our cost, was then inhabited by the Portuguese Envoy, till our lease expired; after which we had no more to do with it. By this place 'tis incredible what we lost. Perhaps if I should say upwards of three thousand pounds, I should not be much in the wrong."

Notwithstanding the loss of their residence, a comparatively great number of Franciscans continued to live and to work in London. About the middle of the eighteenth century there were eleven; towards the end six, as we shall mention in the proper place.

The fathers were now reduced to the necessity of having to rent a room, where they might keep their books and other effects. At the beginning of the eighteenth century, one of them writes: "The room where our books are, costing three pounds a year, has already consumed almost the value of them. Wherefore I heartily wish some course were taken before winter, to dispose of them at a cheaper rate. There be many duplicates, and very many useless among them, which being taken out, much less room will serve them."

But although the fathers afterwards sold part of the books, they found it necessary to keep on the room.

After the disastrous days of November, 1688, one more Preses was appointed, Father Charles Pora. He was subsequently made titular Guardian of London, and died about the year 1695.

Here are some addresses of the Franciscans in the eighteenth century. Father Pulton's and Father Baker's letters are addressed, "At Mr. Wright's the Goldsmith"—sometimes, "the Banker"—"at the sign of the Golden Cup, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden." From 1729-1734, "at Mr. Cabry's, Fan maker, at ye Golden Fan, over against Gray's Inn Gate in Holborn." Letters written by Fathers Cantrill, Parkinson and Smyth have also this address: "Mr. Baker, at Mr. Anderton's in Little Wild Street, near Lincoln's Inn Fields."

In 1758 there were eleven Franciscans in London: Fathers Cantrill, Loraine, Baker, André, Greswold, Ingram, Dixon, Wheeler, Chapman, Rogerson, and Stevens. For nine of them there were livings, the patrons of which were, the Portugese Embassy of three; Lady George Howard of three; the Bavarian Embassy of one; Mrs. Eyre of one; Mr. Bird of one.

About the year 1790 there were six fathers in London: Chapman, Needham, Cox, Stevens, Leo Pilling and Juliaens. The last named was still at Sardinian House, Lincoln's Inn Fields, in the early years of the nineteenth century. He died in 1807. A faithful brother, Francis Harcourt, was his assistant: he had accompanied the fathers when they were expelled from Douai.

LOWER HALL, LANCASHIRE.

In 1796 Mr. Brewer left ten pounds for this residence. Afterwards Lady Stourton became the chief benefactress of this place.

Father Michael Hawarden resided here in 1703. He was still here in 1717, but went away that year, having been appointed Vicar at Douai. He left a note in Father Eyston's hands, wherein he mentioned that five boxes of books were laid up in the new private place at Lower Hall.

Father Painter resided here in 1758.

Among the benefactors of this place were Mrs. Langdale and Mrs. Hesketh, for whom Masses had to be said.

MAPLEDURHAM, OXFORDSHIRE.

Father Felix Englefield mentions this place in his writings. The patron was Mr. Blount.

In 1758 Father Edward Madew resided here; he was then titular Guardian of Newcastle.

MICHELGROVE, HAMPSHIRE.

This place was the seat of the Shelley family.

MONMOUTH.

(Title :—Our Holy Father St. Francis.)

In the year 1687 this residence was founded at the same time as eight others. Father Pacificus Williams was appointed Preses, and filled that office until the year 1705. This worthy and zealous man, having been sometime on the spot, thought it desirable to purchase the old priory; and in this he at length succeeded. The following entry, made when he was still alive furnishes us with the details :

“The priory of Monmouth was purchased by Mr. Williams, senior, alias Father Pacificus a S. Francisco, by the means of a Syndic, and with the consent or approbation of Superiors; and therefore belongs to the Province. But the present tenants, Mr. John Williams and his wife, have their lives in it, paying the Syndic fourteen pounds yearly. The writings are in Mr. Burdet's (the Syndic's) custody.”

Afterwards the fathers had some trouble in asserting their ownership of the priory, which was called into doubt.

The next Preses was Father Jerome Parry, 1705-1714. Then Bernard Baskerville, 1714-1716; Lewis Lewis, 1716-1719; Alexius Jolley, 1719-1722; Lewis Lewis, 1722-1725; Bernard Baskerville, 1725 ; Lewis Lewis, 1726-1732 ; John Beaumont, 1732-1734 ; Athanasius Chapman, 1734.

The following year it was thought well, if possible, to sell the residence, and apply the proceeds to the maintenance of one or more missionaries in the district, until with God's help another residence could be procured and the pious intentions of the benefactors further fulfilled.

It appears that the property was eventually sold for two hundred pounds. Father Chapman was succeeded by : Anthony Parkinson, 1735-1737 ; John Baptist Gibson, 1737-1743 ; Bonaventure Bedingfield, 1743-1747 ; Bruno Babe, 1747-1749 ; Placid Aston, 1749 ; Thomas Eccles, 1750-1758 ; Augustine Hickins, 1758 ; Thomas Dixon, 1759-1761 ; Angelus Ravenhill, 1761-1764 ; Thomas Eccles, 1764-1766 ; Bruno Babe, 1766-1770 ; Nicholas Knight, 1770-1773 ; Lawrence Lorain, 1773 ; Alexius Whalley, 1774-1776 ; Peter Wilcock, 1776-1779 ; Edward Madew, 1779-1782 ; Ignatius Casemore, 1782-1785 ; Augustine Kemble, 1785-1787 ; Lawrence Eccles, 1787 ; Augustine Kemble, 1788-1790 ; Angelus Ingram, 1790 ; Augustine Kemble, 1791-1793 ; Anselm Millward, 1793 ; Andrew Weetman, senior, 1794-1800 ; Joseph Pursell, 1800-1803 ; Ignatius Casemore, 1803-1805 ; Bernardine Fleet, 1805 ; Joseph Tate, 1806-1808 ; Stephen Grafton, 1808 ; Constantius Henrion, 1809-1812.

This was the last appointment.

MOUNT ST. MICHAEL.

The foundation of this residence was decided upon in 1686, for in that year the Chapter considered the proposal of acquiring a plot of ground on which to build a house, for the dwelling of a missionary, and for the accommodation of pilgrims, at the foot of Mount St. Michael, "in the diocese of Llandaff," as the record says, by means of alms received, or to be received by Father Pacificus a S. Francisco.

The reply to the proposal was in the affirmative. The scheme, however, seems not to have been very successful, for there is no further mention of this residence.

OSMOTHERLEY, YORKSHIRE.

(Title :—Our Lady of Mount Grace.)

The residence of Mount Grace dates from the year 1665, when it was accepted by the Chapter. The following year Father William Shepheard was sent thither with the injunction to conform himself in all things to the instructions he would receive from Father Francis a S. Magdalena.

The beginning of this place is thus recorded by Father Bonaventure Parry, who had been Preses here.

"Osmotherley House in Yorkshire was given us by Lady Walmsley, with all the outhouses, a little garden and field, for which she also bought an estate in the Dales of twenty pounds annually and gave it us for ever, on condition of keeping and maintaining one in the said house, for performing duties there for the benefit, devotion and comfort of pilgrims. Which has been successfully continued above thirty years; and may so for many more, provided good, zealous persons be placed there."

In 1674 Father Francis Osbaldeston, or a S. Magdalena, was still "Rector" of Mount Grace. He was succeeded the following year by Marianus Napier. Then came Francis Hardwick in 1680; and the following year, still as "Rector," Father Bernardine Langworth. He governed the residence many years, and during his tenure of office the title of Rector was altered to that of Preses. He was told to repair the old chapel in 1686.

In his time also Lady Elizabeth Pierrepont presented a fine set of vestments to the chapel. And in connection with this subject we have the following interesting document from Father John Cross.

BROTHER JOHN OF THE HOLY CROSS,

of the Seraphic Order of St. Francis, Jubilate Reader and Dr. of Divinity, and Minister Provincial of the Province of England, to the REV. FATHER BERNARDINE LANGWORTH, of the same Order and Province, Preses of the House and Chapel of the Holy Virgin Mary of Mount Grace, in the Parish of Osmotherley, of the Province, County and Diocese of York, health and everlasting salvation.

Whereas the Right Honourable Lady Elizabeth Pierrepont, of the illustrious family of the Earls of Kingston, and daughter of the high born Robert E. of Kingston, for the love of God, the exercise of Divine worship, and through her special devotion to the ever immaculate Mother of Jesus, has given to the said Chapel of the Holy Virgin Mary of Mount Grace, aforesaid, a suit of Church stuff, for the service of God, and the use of the said Chapel, there to remain, and to be preserved, without ever to be removed from the said Chapel, viz., a vestment, stole, maniple, veil, pall, antependiums for the altar and two sideboards, or credences, of white flowered satin, with flowers of gold, laid with gold lace, and gold-coloured fringe; an alb, amice, altar cloth, and corporal, of fine linen, and laced, all marked C.P., and whereas, according to the sacred Constitutions of our Holy Order, it is not lawful to alter the intention of benefactors, in gifts given to the use thereof: to the end that the said Right Honourable Lady's charitable donation aforesaid be not made void, it is our will, and we do expressly command in virtue of Holy Obedience, that the gift forementioned be carefully and faithfully preserved, in, and for, the use of the said Chapel only: and never to be misapplied, contrary to the intention of the illustrious Donor abovesaid. And that this ordination, together with the exhibition of the gift above mentioned, be by you, and by your successors, for ever read and represented, to yours, and their immediate successors respectively, after every provincial Chapter; and that once yearly, within the Octave of the Immaculate Conception of the Mother of Jesus, one Mass be applied by you, or your companion, residing at the said Chapel, for the space of one hundred years (if times permit), and whilst the said place or Chapel shall remain under our government, for the present and eternal welfare of the said Right Honourable Lady, our benefactress. And that a copy of this order be inserted in the Register of the Province.

Given at our residence in London, this 18th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1686, with the consent of the Diffinitory then assembled, under our handwriting, and the great seal of our Office.

BR. JOHN OF THE HOLY CROSS, Minister Provincial.

In 1688 Father Masseus Woolmer was sent to this residence as assistant priest.

Father Bernardine Langworth remained Preses here until the year 1701, with a short interruption in 1692-1693. In the former year Father Bonaventure Parry was Preses, in the latter Father Angelus Bix.

It was probably through the exertions of Father Langworth that a school for young gentlemen had been established here. After his time it began to languish; but in 1702 the fathers decided that an effort should be made to restore it to its former flourishing condition; and in this they were successful. Mrs. Jennison, who had charge of the temporalities of the place, obtained thirty pounds from the Provincial towards the needs of the school. But the improvement was mainly due to the exertions of Father Ambrose Ogle. For Father Bonaventure Parry, who had formerly known the place, wrote:

"Ambrose Ogle is the present incumbent at the Chapel, of whom I have an extraordinary character from all hands. He manages the school to admiration, which has increased very much, the house being almost quite full of scholars. The housekeeper, Mrs. Jennison, performs her part too, to the full content and satisfaction of all."

This difficulty once got over, another trouble was not long in coming. The ownership of the property was called in question at the Bishop's Court at Northallerton, and the neighbouring justices threatened they would get to the root of the matter. In these circumstances, the deeds could not be found. Mrs. Juliana Walmsley had been the purchaser, and had given the place to the fathers. Subsequently all the deeds and writings belonging to the house were in Mr. Calvert of Borrowbrig's hands. This was all the fathers knew. But they hoped that if trouble came, Mrs. Walmsley's heirs would be able to do something in their favour.

The matter came before the Chapter in 1723, and it was asked: "What is to be done, now that the justices of the realm call our ownership of the residence of Mount Grace in question?"

The reply was: "Our residence is at present in danger; but we must endeavour to retain possession by all lawful means possible."

This storm also passed, and the fathers enjoyed many years of peace and tranquillity afterwards in this place.

Mr. Thomas Coates, of Stay House, was a great benefactor to the fathers here. Besides investing one hundred pounds for the incumbent, he gave fifty pounds to supply the altar with wax, altar breads, and wine. One of the conditions of the donation was, "that the family of Stay House be served by the incumbent of Osmotherley as formerly, with all necessary services and rites of the Holy Catholic Church, once in six weeks, or as need shall require."

To this place were also applied five hundred pounds, part of the legacy of Mr. Talbot, which he had intended as a fund for a Franciscan missionary in Northumberland. But not being able to find a place then, the Superiors assigned it for the time being to Mount Grace.

Among the benefactors are also mentioned Anthony Anderton, Christopher Peart, Barbara Ormandy, all before the middle of the eighteenth century; after that, Rudolph Robinson in 1766; Thomas Peart in 1776; and in 1787 John Catton, of St. Columb's in Cornwall.

There were as usual obligations of Masses for the benefactors. We now return to Father Langworth's successors in the office of Preses. These were Bernard Price, 1701-1704; Bruno Taylor, 1704-1707; Ambrose Ogle, 1707-1728; Bernardine Metcalfe, 1728; Peter of Alcantara Adams, 1729-1732. During his term the roof was extensively repaired. Peter of Alcantara Gordon, 1732-1738; Bernard Yates, 1738-1740; Matthew Collingridge, 1740-1749; Bernard Yates, 1749-1752; Matthew Collingridge, 1752-1758; Robert Painter, 1758-1761; Matthew Collingridge, 1761-1764; Lawrence Eccles, 1764-1770; Ambrose Payne, 1770; Bruno Babe, 1771-1773; Bernardine Fleet, 1773-1776; Bruno Babe, 1776-1778; Lawrence Eccles, 1778; Lawrence Hall, 1779-1782; Lawrence Eccles, 1782-1785 ; Thomas Cottrell, 1785-1787 ; Peter Wilcock, 1787 ; Thomas Cottrell, 1788-1790 ; Henry Waring, 1790 ; Peter Coghlan, 1791-1793 ; Ignatius Casemore, 1793-1800 ; Bernardine Fleet, 1800.

Already in 1796, after the expulsion from Douai, it had been resolved to open a noviciate at Osmotherley, and to appoint a novice master for the place. A further step was taken in the year 1800 towards making the place a regular friary, and Father Henry Waring was appointed Guardian.

But the plan was not destined to succeed, and the appointment of a Preses was resumed, the office being filled by Alexius Whalley, 1803-1805 ; Joseph Pursell, 1805 ; Augustine Roberts, 1806-1808 ; Ignatius Casemore, 1808 ; James Howse, 1809-1812. He was the last.

PEMBRIDGE CASTLE, MONMOUTHSHIRE.

Pembridge Castle was served one Sunday in the month from Perthyre (or Perthyr), for which Mr. Townly gave a salary of six guineas per annum. Thus Father Felix Englefield in his notes, 1758.

PERTHYR, IN ROCKFIELD PARISH, MONMOUTHSHIRE.

The patron and chief benefactor of this residence was Mr. Lorymer. Some Masses were to be said for him annually ; and the "Si quæris" in honour of St. Anthony of Padua was to be recited every Tuesday for his intention.

In 1758 two Franciscans resided here—Fathers Augustine Hickins and Thomas Eccles.

An effort was made in 1815 to make this the noviciate house, and the residence was called "Conventus Perthyranus." But after three years trial the undertaking was abandoned, and the noviciate transferred to Aston.

READING.

All we know of this place is what is found in Father Bonaventure Parry's writings. "Mr. Grimston," he says, "did once hire a chamber in the town of Reading for the convenience of poor Catholics to serve God; but I know not whether he has it now."

This is Father Martin Grimston, who came on the mission in 1695.

ROLLESTON PARK, STAFFORDSHIRE.

The residence of Rolleston dates from the year 1654, as appears from the will of Sir William Powell, Knight. He was grand-uncle to Father John Powell.

ROUGHEY, OR ROFFEY, SUSSEX.

We learn from a memorandum in Father Collingridge's time that, towards the beginning and in the early part of the nineteenth century, this place was attended on the first Sunday of every month by the incumbent of West Grinstead.

For this service Mr. Webbe Weston, Esq., of Sutton Place, near Ripley, in Surrey, paid twelve pounds a year to the Procurator of the Franciscans.

ROWINGTON, WARWICKSHIRE.

A bequest was made about the year 1686 by Thomas Atwood, Frances his wife, and Jane Milburne, from the parish of Rowington, for an English Franciscan to serve the place. They also stipulated that the sum they had left, one hundred pounds, or the interest, might afterwards be applied to a house of the Order in England, according to the wishes of Superiors. There was an obligation of Masses attached to this legacy.

The fathers came to a favourable decision, having considered the proposal, on April 27, 1686, and accepted the incumbency of the place.

We find Rowington mentioned in 1758 in connection with Baddesley. We hear of it once more in 1773, when it is decided that "the incumbent, who has for some time past received twenty pounds per annum from Mrs. Mary Markham's fund, must say one Mass every fortnight for the repose of her soul."

SARNESFIELD COURT, NEAR WEOBLY, HEREFORDSHIRE.

This was once the residence of the Monington family, and was for some time served by the Jesuit fathers.

A Franciscan, Father Leo Haddon, was resident priest at this place about the year 1787, as appears from the Procurator's notes. About ten years later an attempt was made to open a noviciate here; but the plan did not succeed.

SHIREFIELD, HAMPSHIRE.

We have a complete description of this residence in the year 1758. The incumbent of Shirefield was chiefly maintained by Mr. Holman's legacy for the missionary serving the poor in Hampshire. In connection with this fund fifty-two Masses had to be discharged annually. He had also an allowance of Mr. Sheldon for serving Shirefield; of Mr. Betts for serving Bishop's Waltham; and of Mr. Young for serving Stockbridge.

The father who was in residence here had also to attend to the spiritual needs of Catholics at Barton Stacey, Uphusborn, Basingstoke and Whitchurch (Hants), in case there was no other priest available for duty in those parts.

SIZARGH, NEAR KENDAL, WESTMORELAND.

This place was at one time served by the fathers of the Society of Jesus. Father Lawrence Eccles, O.S.F., was here in 1807.

SOLIHULL, WARWICKSHIRE.

This residence must have existed before 1758, for in that year it was in full working order; and among the chief benefactors were Mr. Ferrers, Mrs. Elizabeth Levison, Mrs. Dorothy Levison, and Mrs. Ashley; for all of whom there were obligations of Masses.

The mission very probably dates from about the year 1750; for Mrs. Elizabeth Levison, who may be considered one of the founders, is mentioned in connection with the place as being still alive in 1758.

In 1761 Elizabeth Palmer left twenty pounds, the interest of which was partly to be given to the incumbent, who had to say five Masses for the repose of her soul; the rest to be distributed among the poor of Shirley Street.

In 1815 William Collins left the rents of some lands to the Franciscan missionary at Solihull, with the obligation of saying six Masses annually for the repose of his soul and those of his relatives.

In the same year, Mrs. Anne Barron bequeathed two hundred pounds to our mission at Solihull, in consideration of which ten Masses annually had to be said for ten years; after that two per annum.

In 1821 this mission received the half, or one hundred pounds, of the legacy of William and Elizabeth Lewin. One Mass had to be said every three weeks for their eternal repose.

In 1824 a sum of fifty pounds was left by Mrs. Elizabeth Green for our Missionary here.

STOKESLEY, YORKSHIRE.

This place was permanently served by one of the Franciscan fathers of Osmotherley, as appears from Father Englefield's writings.

Previous to the year 1758 Mr. Bradshaw Pearson had left one hundred pounds for the priest's remuneration.

STONECROFT, NEAR HEXHAM.

This residence owes its origin to Ursula Mountney of Stonecroft, who left by will, in the second half of the seventeenth century, twenty pounds towards the support of a Dominican or Franciscan priest here.

✓ Not long after the Franciscans began to serve the place. In 1686 the resident father, owing as it appears to some legal difficulty, was in danger of being evicted. The Definitors deliberated on the matter, and resolved to write to the patron of the place, Sir Rudolph Clavering, asking him to do all in his power to maintain the incumbent in possession.

Father Peter Atkinson died here in 1687.

9 In 1690 it was decided that the property in Stonecroft and Hubush should be let to farm to some discreet Catholic, qualified to entertain a priest for the service of Catholics in Hexham and Warden, and the neighbourhood.

TICHBORNE, HAMPSHIRE.

This residence is mentioned by Father Felix Englefield in 1758. In that year two Franciscans were living here together, Fathers Beaumont and Ravenhill.

The patron was Sir H. Tichborne.

TOR ABBEY, DEVONSHIRE.

Father Beaumont served this mission for six years, about the middle of the eighteenth century.

Many years later another Franciscan ministered here, Father Pursell, who arrived on September 23, 1820. But he was then in weak health, and died the following year.

TUSMORE, NEAR BRACKLEY, NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

This residence is mentioned about the year 1790, when Father Augustine Kemble lived here, as appears from the Procurator's notes.

UFTON COURT, BERKSHIRE.

Father Felix Englefield mentions this place in his list of residences drawn up in 1758. The patron was Mr. Perkins.

Father Felix Price served the residence in the above year; and Father Athanasius Baynham was here towards the close of the eighteenth century.

UGBROOKE, DEVONSHIRE.

The seat of the Cliffords. The place is mentioned as having been served nearly always by the Jesuit fathers.

A Franciscan, Father Peter Frost, resided here in 1758, as we know from Father Englefield's list. This kind and zealous priest laboured here for about ten years; for though his register only commences with October, 1757, it seems that he had arrived in the previous year. He continued until June, 1766, when, to the sincere regret of the Clifford family, he was destined by his Superiors to take charge of the school at Edgbaston. (Dr. Oliver.)

UGTHORPE, YORKSHIRE.

A proposal was submitted to the Franciscan Chapter in 1684, "whether the Province would accept the incumbency of Ugthorpe in Yorkshire, now held by ✓ the Rev. Father George Smith, of the Order of Hermits of St. Augustine, who receives twelve pounds per annum for his services; with this condition, that our missionary shall receive two pounds annually during Father Smith's lifetime, and after his death ten. On the understanding, however, that those ten pounds shall revert to the Augustinian fathers, if they obtain from the Holy See faculties for the English mission." The proposal was accepted, and the deed of agreement with Father Smith was put in the archives.

We find the following entry in the "Catalogue of writings" in 1704: "Georg Smyth's Covenant concerning Ugthorp, July 24, 1684."

WARWICK.

(Title :—St. Mary of the Angels.)

Warwick is the eighth on the list of nine residences decreed in 1687. Father Nicholas Dalyson, or Dallison, laboured here constantly, with one interruption about the year 1700, from the beginning till the year 1707.

He saw his foundation pass through various vicissitudes, for in 1704 the Chronicler writes :

“About the same time as Mr. Randolph set up at Birmingham, Mr. Dalyson also begun a chapel at Warwick, where he purchased the ground it stood upon. But this, as well as all the others throughout the whole kingdom, was destroyed too : but the ground is not alienated. The things belonging to this place, Mr. Dalyson can give good account of.”

Father Dalyson was succeeded as Preses by Francis Dodd, who was here from 1707 until 1740, with an interruption in 1731, when the office was filled by George Lancaster ; then Lawrence Lorain, 1740-1744 ; John Baptist Gibson, 1744-1747 ; George Lancaster, 1747-1755 ; Anthony Lancaster, 1755-1758 ; Henry Bishop, 1758-1764 ; Placidus Payne, 1764-1767 ; Peter Frost, 1767-1770 ; George Lancaster, 1770-1773 ; Thomas Dixon, 1773-1788 ; Henry Bishop, 1788-1793 ; Angelus Ingram, 1793 ; Henry Bishop, 1794-1800 ; Lewis Kellery, 1800-1805 ; Lawrence

This is the place to mention that in 1749 the fathers decided that one hundred pounds were to be distributed among the poor Catholics of the parish of Burbuck* and vicinity, to fulfil our obligations, according to the directions given by Father Dodd, Preses of Warwick, before his death, in 1747.

WEST GRINSTRAD, SUSSEX.

This mission was served by the Jesuit Fathers from 1701 to 1755. In the preceding year Mr. Caryll had addressed himself to the Franciscans at Douai, who sent Father Placid Payne, then newly ordained, to serve the place, until a final arrangement could be made.

As Father Felix Englefield was Provincial at this time, we shall relate the circumstances in his own words.

"July, 1758. Mr. Edward Caryll made a foundation at this time, for one of ours to serve the poor Catholics at West Grinstead, which place formerly belonged to that noble family; and for which he gave the sum of thirteen hundred pounds; which gift and donation was accepted by our Chapter in July, 1758. And in which, in gratitude for so great a charity, it was ordered that at his death there should be a solemn High Mass and Dirge, with all the Masses of the day, performed at Douai. And five hundred Masses discharged by our missionaries, as the Rev. Father Provincial for the time being should appoint. That his anniversary should be kept, and a weekly Mass performed by the incumbent, as well as nine anniversaries for his relations.

Note.—That Mr. Caryll is to receive the income of the said sum from us during his life; and that one hundred pounds of it is to go for the purchase of the place, in case it is to be sold.”

At the time mentioned above, July, 1758, Father Payne had completed the furnishing of the residence, towards which the Province contributed the sum of eighteen pounds.

Father Felix Englefield says that Father Houghton resided here in 1758.

The following are the names of the Franciscans who served this mission: Fathers Payne, Dixon, Copley, Chapman, Pilling, Cottrell and McDonnell, who became Provincial in 1815. He was the last.

WHITE HILL, LANCASHIRE.

(Title :—The Holy Cross.)

The foundation of the residence of White Hill, "in the chapelry of Goosnargh, and the parish of Kirkham," dates from the year 1687.

Some years later, after the "great Revolution," we find the following description of it :

"The residence of White Hill was procured by Father Michael Jackson, and consists of a Chapel, and a little dwelling-place at one end ; the ground of which was given us by Mr. Cuthbert Hesketh, upon conditions expressed in his deed, that is in Mr. Michael Jackson's hands, and a copy in ours. The same Mr. Cuthbert Hesketh put out two hundred pounds, Mr. Gabriel Hesketh and Mr. Evan Gerard being trustees, the interest of which being ten pounds per annum, for maintaining a missionary of ours, who is obliged to say two Masses per week for the said Mr. Cuthbert and his wife ; to serve the poor Catholics of the parishes of Goosnargh and Chipping ; and if permitted make his abode and live at the Chapel of White Hill.

"The Chapel being uncovered by the mob, the walls are ordered to be taken down, and all the materials either sold or laid up safe."

The sacred edifice, however, soon rose out of its ruins, and the residence flourished for more than one hundred years in the hands of the Franciscans.

A certain number of Masses had to be said annually for the following benefactors, besides Mr. Hesketh, the founder : Jane Adamson, Richard Holden, James Ayrrer, the Cardwell family, Gilbert Slater, Jane Armstrong, Thomas Slaughter and Alice his wife.

In 1688 Father Joseph Trappes was sent as assistant to Father Michael Jackson, who was the first Preses, and held that office until 1710. He was succeeded by Henry Appleton, 1710-1738; Charles Tootell, 1738-1752; John Evangelist Tootell, 1752; Robert Painter, 1753-1755; Charles Tootell, 1755-1758; Leo Francis, 1758-1761; Charles Tootell, 1761-1764; Robert Painter, 1764-1767; Leo Francis, 1767-1770; Bernardine Fleet, 1770-1773; Lawrence Eccles, 1773-1776; Bernard Yates, 1776-1778; Alexius Whalley, 1778; Peter Wilcock, 1779-1782; Anthony Caley, 1782-1784; Peter Wilcock, 1784; Ignatius Casemore, 1785-1787; James Howse, 1787; Nicholas Knight, 1788-1790; Ignatius Casemore, 1790; Peter Wilcock, 1791-1794; Henry Waring, 1794-1800; Pacificus Kington, 1800-1803; Joseph Tate, 1803-1805; Bonaventure Martin, 1805-1808; Joseph Tate, 1808; Anselm Millward, 1809. My bridle, saddle, whip, boots, spurs and spatter-dashes I leave to my successor, if a Brother of our Province, who may have the use of them; of my two tomes in folio of Père Henno's Divinity, and of all the other books in my closet, all of which belong to the body of the English Franciscans, or to some particular members thereof, whose names are in them, or else R.A. [Recollectorum Anglorum].

Father McDonnell served this mission from 1826 to 1839. In 1832 he was appointed Visitor of the Province, previously to the Chapter at which he was elected Provincial. YORK.

(Title:—The Blessed Sacrament.)

"In the year 1687," says the chronicler, "Mr. John Cross, then Provincial, established a residence and school for youth at York; where were two preachers, and two masters of humanity, first begun in Jubber Gate, and afterwards continued in Castle Gate."

The first Preses of the residence was Father Bonaventure Parry. Father Bernardine Barras was his assistant and taught the school.

In 1688 Fathers Elias van Eecke and Mathias Roelhoof, two of the ten Belgian fathers who had come to help on the English mission, came as assistants.

But on November 22 of this year all were forced to fly. For some years afterwards, however, a Preses continued to be appointed.

Father Gregory Jones, alias Andrews, was Preses from 1689 to 1695. After him Father Bernardine Barras in 1695. Then Daniel Selby in 1696. He was the last.

In 1704 the chronicler added: "The house was hired: so no more a residence now."

MEMBERS OF THE SECOND ENGLISH FRANCISCAN PROVINCE.

It is morally certain that the names of all the fathers will be found here. For although in 1634 we must account for five Religious, of which number only three can be traced, it is not improbable that the other two are lay brothers, whose names are not given.* Further, there is, it is true, a break in the record between 1640 and 1647; but fortunately we have in the latter year a list of deceased since 1640. The death of some of the Religious is not mentioned; but, on the other hand, we have on four occasions a general statement as regards the number of deaths. In the year 1634 it is said that "five Religious have died," among whom was William a Sancto Augustino. In 1653 "at the College of Douai three of the brethren have died." In 1655 "at the College of Douai two of our brethren have died; on the Mission one." In 1656 "the number of deceased since the last Provincial Chapter is five." Reference may be made to these statements in case of doubt. With regard to aliases, great care has been taken to discriminate the individuals accurately. It should be borne in mind that the fathers were often known by their baptismal names on the mission, not by their religious names. All are priests, unless otherwise stated.

* Lay brother, properly speaking, means a member of the First Order; but it is also used for Tertiaries in the writings of the old Franciscans.

FATHER ANDREW A SOTO,

Whereas our Most Reverend Father General, Benignus of Genoa, has committed to me the care of sending to England and Scotland such fathers as seem suitable to labour in the Lord's vineyard, for the comfort of Catholics, who groan under the heavy yoke of persecution, and for the restoration and preservation of our Order in those parts; and as he has given me power to call English and Scotch Religious from any Province whatever : I enjoin you, in whose zeal and piety I trust, in virtue of Holy Obedience, to come to these parts at your earliest convenience, in order to be sent into the Lord's harvest there, or to prepare yourself for the mission here among your countrymen, until you shall be judged fit to go. I herewith recommend you to our Prelates as well as to the Faithful of the places where you happen to stop on the way.

He was a man of acute and vigorous mind, and sprightly humour; and united to ardent zeal the most delicate forbearance and charity. His life was wholly employed in the service of religion.

He was professor of theology, 1707-1722; titular Guardian of Canterbury, 1716-1719; Custos, 1719-1722; sent on the mission, and appointed titular Guardian of Greenwich, in 1722; and again 1728-1731; Definitor, 1731-1733, when he was elected Vicar Provincial on the death of Father Philip Sadler. About this time his address was: At Mr. Cabry's, Fan Maker, over against Gray's Inn Gate. He was Provincial, 1734-1737; Procurator in 1738; again Provincial, 1743-1746. He died in England in 1759.

In 1689, at the time of the Revolution, he was arrested, and thrown into Leicester gaol, where he was kept two years and four months. He had been sentenced to death; but the Prince of Orange commuted this sentence into that of exile. In consequence, he was forced to leave the country, and went to Belgium, where he took up his abode at the residence of the English Franciscans at Bruges, attached to the convent of the nuns of the Third Order, to whom they were confessors. He went to his reward on August 24, 1691, and was buried in the cloister of the convent. On his tombstone was the following inscription:

During this time he had also the honorary titles of Preses of Birmingham in 1806; of Mount Grace in 1808; titular Guardian of Cambridge, 1812-1815; of London, 1815-1818; of Coventry in 1818; and again in 1824. In 1818 he resigned the incumbency of Falmouth owing to declining health, and retired to the Convent of Poor Clares at Coxside, Plymouth, where he died November 29, 1824, aged seventy-three years; and was buried in their cemetery.

CHAPMAN, ATHANASIUS (baptismal name FRANCIS), a native of Warwickshire, first studied at the English College, Rome, where he received minor orders in 1722. But he left at the end of the same year, and joined the English Franciscans at Douai in 1727. He was

CLARK, SAMUEL, A S. HENRICO, was appointed titular

Father Davenport was appointed to replace him. He went to the General Chapter in Rome in 1625, where he so well pleaded the cause of the English Franciscans that he obtained a decree for the restoration of the Province. The next year he was re-appointed Guardian of Douai, and continued to teach his brethren, a task on which he had entered when the new college at Douai was opened in 1621. By the decree of the erection of the second English Province, under the title of the Immaculate Conception, dated 1629, he was made the first Custos. He was appointed titular Guardian of London in 1632; Definitor, 1634-1637; Provincial, 1637-1640; Guardian of Douai, 1647-1650, again Provincial, 1650-1653. He was declared Doctor of Divinity in 1661; Provincial, 1665-1668; in the latter year his jubilee in the Order was solemnly celebrated. He was a learned man, well versed in every branch of philosophical and ecclesiastical science, and he combined zeal with discretion. His works, in two folio volumes, were printed at Douai in 1665. His eminent qualities enabled him to render great service in the cause of Religion. Among his spiritual conquests he reconciled to the Church Anne Duchess of York in August, 1670. He was one of Queen Catherine's chaplains, and resided at Somerset House. It was there that, worn out in the service of Religion, he closed his mortal career, early on Whit Sunday, May 31, 1680, aged eighty-five years. According to his wish, he was buried in St. John's Church of the Savoy. In the record of his death he is described as "the very reverend and venerable Father in Christ, Francis a S. Clara, of blessed memory, three times Provincial Minister; who, having completed his triple jubilee, as religious, priest and missionary, showed himself a prudent and most loving father to his brethren and children until the end, helping them in all their needs. On the English mission he was a vigilant pastor and faithful labourer for fifty-seven years; making himself all to all, he gained both rich and poor; his name is held in veneration both at home and abroad."

DAVENPORT, IGNATIUS, A S. MAGDALENA, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1657. He came on the mission in 1660; titular Guardian of Greenwich, 1665-1668; and of Cambridge, 1671-1674; Definitor, 1674-1677; again titular Guardian of Cambridge in 1677. He was titular Guardian of Cambridge in 1820; of Coventry in 1821; of Worcester in 1823; of Newcastle in 1824; of Oxford in 1827; of Worcester in 1829; Definitor and titular Guardian of York, 1832-1835; titular Guardian of Bristol in 1835. He was a jubilarian in the Order. From the Franciscan Register it would appear that his death occurred in 1656. But Anthony Wood in his "Athenæ Oxonienses" says that he died in 1658, and was buried near the west end of St. Ebbe's Church at Oxford.

DE LA RUE, ALBERT, lay brother, died in 1717.

DICKENSON, THEODORE, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1678; in 1686 it was rumoured that he was living with the "Cordeliers" (a name given to the Observants as well as to the Conventuals); and it was resolved to take information on the subject. The inquiry must have proved satisfactory, for in 1691 he was sent on the mission. He was titular Guardian of Worcester, 1707-1710; and of Cambridge, 1713-1717. He died a jubilarian at Douai in 1720.

DICKINSON, MATTHEW, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1749; professor of philosophy, 1749-1752; Vicar of Douai and novice master, 1752-1755; continued Vicar, and appointed professor of theology, 1755-1758; confessor at Bruges, 1758-1761; Guardian of Douai, 1761-1764; sent on the mission and elected Definitor in 1764. He was Preses of the residence of Monmouth, 1759-1761; and of Birmingham, 1761-1764; titular Guardian of Norwich, 1767-1770; Preses of Warwick from 1773 until his death which occurred in 1775 or 1776.

EAST, AUGUSTINE, A S. CLARA (baptismal name

LEWIS), was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1634, and appointed professor of philosophy; Definitor, 1647-1650; Guardian of Douai, 1650-1653. He taught Holy Scripture, 1647-1653; Custos, 1654. He came on the mission in 1655, and was imprisoned for the Faith, but afterwards liberated. He was titular Guardian of Greenwich, 1656-1659; and of Cambridge, 1662-1665; Custos, 1665-1668; titular Guardian of York, 1668-1671; of Greenwich in 1672 and again 1677-1680. He died at Paris in the month of May, 1680. About the middle of the seventeenth century a few of the English nuns of the Third Order at Nieuport went to Paris on account of the troubles of the wars in Flanders. They had a house with enclosure there, and our fathers were from time to time appointed their confessors. This accounts for Father East's death occurring there. He is the translator of St. Bonaventure's "Stimulus amoris."

ECCLES, BONAVENTURE, a professed cleric, who obtained dispensation from his vows in 1823.

ECCLES, LAWRENCE, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1758; Preses of Mount Grace, 1764-1770; titular Guardian of Newcastle, 1770-1773; Preses of White Hill, 1773-1776; titular Guardian of York in 1776 and 1777; Preses of Mount Grace in 1778; titular Guardian of York, 1779-1782; Preses of Mount Grace, 1782-1785; Preses of Monmouth in 1787; titular Guardian of York in 1788 and 1789; Preses of Warwick in 1805; titular Guardian of Greenwich, 1806 and 1807; of Norwich, 1808; of Cambridge, 1809.

ECCLES, THOMAS, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1746; Preses of the residence of Monmouth, 1750-1758. About this time he lived at Perthyr. Preses of Hereford, 1758-1764; again Preses of Monmouth in 1764. He died at Douai in 1767.

EDGEWORTH, JOSEPH, a professed cleric, secularized in 1824.

EDGEWORTH, LEO (baptismal name FRANCIS), was born in London, April 26, 1799. He was still a cleric in 1820, when he was appointed professor of philosophy. After his ordination he was made incumbent at St. Peter's, Birmingham. In August, 1824, Bishop Collingridge placed him at Weymouth, where he remained until the spring of 1825, when he was sent to St. Joseph's Chapel, Bristol. During the frightful riots at the beginning of November, 1831, he so distinguished himself by his humanity and heroism as to deserve a civic crown. To meet the rapid growth of Catholicity in Bristol, he purchased a large plot at Clifton for the erection of a spacious church. The ground was first broken on August 11, 1834, and on October 4 following he laid the foundation stone. In the Order he had held the honorary titles of Guardian of Oxford, 1823-1826; of Cambridge in 1827 and 1828; of Canterbury in 1829; again of Cambridge, 1832-1835; of York, 1835-1838. At the Chapter held at Clifton in the latter year, he was elected Provincial, but the General hesitated to confirm him in that office. The enterprise of the contemplated church at Clifton was far too gigantic for his limited means. He became involved in such inextricable difficulties, that he had to seek refuge on the continent from the importunities of his creditors; and he went to Antwerp, where he died suddenly on November 16, 1850, aged fifty-one years. (Dr. Oliver.)

EDMUNDSON, PETER, A S. MARIA, a professed cleric, of whom great hopes were entertained. At the time of the persecution kindled by the Prince of Orange, he was sent with three other clerics from Douai to the friary of the Recollects of the Province of St. Joseph at Bruges, in order to make room for our missionaries who fled from England. It was in that House that he closed his mortal career at the early age of twenty, in the first year of his profession, on April 6, 1690. His death is recorded among the memorable events; and it is mentioned that the words of praise bestowed by Alexander of Hales on St. Bonaventure could be applied to him, that "it seemed as if in him Adam had not sinned."

ELLIS, ANGELUS, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1731. He died in 1737.

EMERTON, FRANCIS, lay brother, died at Douai in 1767.

ENGLEFIELD, FELIX, a young priest who died at Douai in the year 1704.

ENGLEFIELD, FELIX, was appointed professor of philosophy when still a cleric, in 1731. Not long after he was ordained, and approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1732. He was professor of theology, 1734-1746; titular Guardian of York in 1744 and 1745; Definitor, 1746-1749; titular Guardian of Oxford in 1749; and of Greenwich in 1750 and 1751. He went to the General Chapter in Rome in 1750 in place of the Provincial, Father Thomas Holmes, who was prevented by age and infirmities from going himself. He was Custos, 1752-1755; Provincial, 1755-1758. About this time he resided at Horton in Gloucestershire. He died at Douai in 1767. Among his writings is a complete list of Franciscans on the English mission in 1758, with their addresses.

EVANS, CHARLES, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1731. He died at Douai in 1752.

✓ EVERINGHAM, PETER, vulgo CATRIS or CATRICE, was on the English mission some years before 1665, when it was resolved to recall him. He is again mentioned as being on the mission in 1686. He died near Cheshunt in Hertfordshire in 1687.

✓ EYSTON, BERNARD, A S. FRANCISCO, (baptismal name JOHN), descended from a distinguished family in Berkshire, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1653, and appointed professor of philosophy. He was professor of theology, 1656-1668, when he was declared Doctor of Divinity. He was a man of rare ability, and even in official documents styled, "Eminent Father Bernard." He was confessor at Aire, 1668-1671. He was then appointed prefect of studies, and also novice master. In 1672 his sight began to fail, so that he had to discontinue teaching. Confessor at Bruges, 1674-1677. Having prepared many labourers for the Lord's vineyard, he wished to share their work, and came on the mission in 1677. He laboured for some time with great zeal and fruit; but the religious troubles following upon Oates' Plot, together with his infirmity, for he was lame, forced him to return to the Continent. He was Definitor, 1680-1683; confessor at Aire, 1683-1686; Definitor, 1686-1689; confessor at Bruges, 1687-1691; and at Aire, 1691-1695; he was again made prefect of studies at Douai in 1693; confessor at Bruges, 1696-1697; and at Aire, 1700-1706. He retired to Douai, an octogenarian, and spent his time in writing pious treatises. One day, having made his preparation for the celebration of Mass, he took suddenly ill, and after receiving Extreme Unction, fell asleep in the Lord, a jubilarian of his profession and priesthood, in the year 1709, which was the eighty-second of his age, the sixty-fifth of his religious life, the fifty-eighth of priesthood; and he was buried in the cloister on the south side.

His portrait in oil is at Hendred House.

EYSTON, BONAVENTURE (baptismal name WILLIAM), was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1704, and for the mission in 1710. In 1728 he made application for a transfer to the Dominican Order, which was granted.

EYSTON, JOHN CAPISTRAN (baptismal name CHARLES), was approved for preaching and hearing confessions, and also for the mission in 1704; titular Guardian of Worcester and Procurator of the Province, 1716-1719; Definitor, 1719-1722; titular Guardian of London, 1722-1725. During this time he remained Procurator. Definitor, 1725-1728. About this time he was at East Hendred. He was titular Guardian of London, 1728-1731; Provincial in 1731, in which office he died on the mission, July 31, 1732.

FISHER, BONAVENTURE (baptismal name SAMUEL), was born at Uppingham in Rutlandshire on October 20, 1792. He was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1818, and began his missionary labours at Taunton in the same year. After contributing greatly by his zeal and abilities to the propagation of the Catholic Faith in the town and neighbourhood, he had the consolation of seeing the foundation stone of a public chapel laid in the Crescent in April, 1821, and of witnessing its opening in July, 1822. In the Order he was honoured with the titles of Guardian of Worcester in 1821; of London, 1823-1826; of Canterbury in 1826; of York, 1827-1828; of Newcastle in 1829; of Bristol in 1832; and of London in 1835; from 1823-1834 he was confessor of the Poor Clares of Aire, then at Coxside, Plymouth. He was one of the signatories at the last Chapter meeting at Clifton in 1838; from the year 1835 until 1865 he was incumbent of Llanarth, in Monmouthshire. He afterwards retired to Pontypool, where he died, January 14, 1875.

FLEET, BERNARDINE, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1767, and at the same time appointed professor of philosophy; Preses of the residence of White Hill, 1770-1773; and of Mount Grace, 1773-1776; novice master, 1779-1782; confessor of Poor Clares at Aire, 1782-1785; Preses of Abergavenny in 1787; titular Guardian of Canterbury, 1788-1789; and of York, 1790-1793; Preses of Hexham in 1793; appointed titular Guardian of Norwich in 1794; Preses of Mount Grace in 1800; titular Guardian of Newcastle in 1803; Preses of Monmouth in 1805; titular Guardian of York in 1806; and of Canterbury in 1808. About this time he resided at Cheeseburn Grange, near Newcastle. He was elected Definitor and appointed Preses of Hexham in 1809; titular Guardian of Newcastle in 1812; and of Oxford in 1814. He died a jubilarian in the Order in 1815.

FLEMING, JEROME, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1728, and also appointed professor of philosophy. The following year he became professor of theology; confessor at Aire, 1734-1737; Vicar of Douai and novice master, 1737-1740, when he was sent on the mission. He was titular Guardian of Oxford in 1744. He died in England in 1750.*

FORTESCUE, ANGELUS, A S. MARIA, renounced a plentiful estate to embrace Franciscan poverty. He was approved for preaching and hearing confessions, and also for the mission, in 1686. In November, 1687, * Father Thomas Flynn, O.S.F., a native of Ireland, who was at Plymouth about the year 1800, did not belong to the English Province.

he was appointed as preacher to the staff of the newly formed community at Lincoln's Inn Fields. He was titular Guardian of Newcastle in 1691; and of Worcester, 1695-1698; elected Definitor in 1698. A severe trial was now in store for him. Whilst chaplain to Sir John Shelley, Bart., of Michelgrove in Hampshire, he was infamously calumniated by some malevolent tongues. Thereupon he was, not without danger of his life, imprisoned for five months in London, after which his friends succeeded in obtaining his release. A judicial inquiry was then held, but nothing could be proved against him. He was thereupon declared innocent by the civil court, by the Chapter of the Franciscans, and by the Bishop. The two following letters were written to vindicate his character: the first by Sir John Shelley to the Provincial Chapter, the other by the fathers of the Chapter to Sir John.

GENTLEMEN,

Here is a persecution pointed indeed directly against Mr. Fortescue, but the design is too plainly laid against the whole. If you are unanimous in his defence, I resolve to stand by you, and then one thing I expect as necessary to confound H. G. (whose wild passion, with the instigation of cunninger knaves, has made a tool through him, to undo you all, at least in these parts), viz., to give Mr. Fortescue under your hands such a character, as your, and my long experience assures us he deserves. Not that any of us can think a man of his known integrity wants it, but by that means I shall be better enabled to parry the violent thrusts of our malicious enemies. And now to convince the whole world of the good opinion I and my family have of Mr. Fortescue's solid virtue towards God, and sincerity towards us, notwithstanding the calumnies so barbarously spread against him, specially that notorious one of a Lampoon, upon the testimony of a proud slut, against our express and certain knowledge, I desire you would provide me with another Gentleman of the same coat, who may be fit to undertake the government of my son. This is all I have to offer at present to the honoured Congregation, besides my earnest desire of your good prayers, and repeated assurances of being to the utmost of my power,

Your humble servant,

JOHN SHELLEY.

The following is the answer :

SIR,

We are deeply sensible of the endeavours which have been used by sundry persons, upon several aims to create a disturbance in your honourable family : and we are no less edified at your more than ordinary prudence, in baffling all their petty designs, by preserving a good understanding with each other. The hand of Providence seems to have manifestly appeared in confirmation of its own edict : " Whom God has joined, let no man separate." Moreover, we humbly hope, it has made Mr. Fortescue particularly instrumental. Hence we are glad of the occasion you present us, of giving him the character, we in our consciences think he deserves. Wherefore we, whose names are underwritten, after upward of twenty years experience do declare, to the best of our judgments, we believe him a man of solid virtue and learning, ever truly obedient to his superiors, and truly beloved by his brethren, and as he was the first that appeared at the King's bench bar, since the late revolution, upon account of Religion; so if any person or persons upon a pique, or hatred to the Catholic Faith, think fit to make a further trial of his Christian fortitude, we firmly believe, and hope, God by his grace will enable him to convince the thinking part of mankind (for the giddy will never be satisfied), that his vocation, from a plentiful estate to evangelical poverty, was real and unfeigned. So leaving him, with your Honoured Self and family, to the blessing and protection of the Almighty, we subscribe to all above said, and remain,

Your humble servants,

BR. P. PRICE.

GENNINGS, JOHN, was born at Lichfield in 1570, and was educated a rank Puritan. His conversion was little short of miraculous, and reminds us of that of St. Paul. Not long after the martyrdom of his brother Edmund, he left England, and went to Douai, where he became a Catholic. He studied at the English College, and was ordained priest in 1607. The following year he came on to the English mission. He received the Franciscan habit from Father William Staney, Commissary of the Order for England, and went afterwards to the friary of Ypres in Flanders for his religious training. A few years later he founded the College of St. Bonaventure at Douai, and became the restorer of the English Franciscan Province. It was probably in 1618 or shortly after that the General made him " Vicar of England ;" nor could he well bestow on him another title, the Commissary, Father Staney, being still alive. He was appointed Custos in 1625 ; and by the decree of the General of the Order, promulgated in 1630, he was made the first Provincial of the restored Province ; he was re-elected to this office in 1634, and again in 1643. Long before his death, the fathers put up in the cloister at Douai a marble slab to his memory, on which he was represented in the Franciscan habit, kneeling before the crucifix. His portrait in oil, which was formerly at St. Peter's Presbytery, Birmingham, has been for many years at St. Francis', West Gorton, Manchester.

Father Gennings closed his long and laborious career at Douai on November 12, 1660, and was buried in the sanctuary of the old church. After the completion of the new church, a marble slab was put up in the sanctuary, over the sacristy door, on the epistle side thus inscribed :

He studied at the university of Cambridge, and obtaining the degree of B.A. was appointed librarian to his college ; afterwards he went to London, where he was received into the Catholic Church. He entered the English College at Douai, but his stay there was short ; for conceiving a strong desire of joining the English Franciscans in that town, the superiors of the College, satisfied that he had a true vocation for the Order, recommended him to the Franciscans, who admitted him to the habit in 1623. In 1630 he was appointed Vicar, and in 1632 Guardian of Douai. In 1634 he also began to teach theology. He was Custos, as well as Guardian of Douai, 1637-1640. Shortly after he was allowed to come on the English mission. Long and ardent had been his desire to give his life for Christ. Whereupon the old man felt so happy that he did not wish to leave Douai again, but was admitted to the habit of St. Francis as a tertiary. At the moment when his son laid down his life for Christ, he had a vision, in which he saw a brilliant light ascending into heaven; and he told the bystanders that his son had that moment obtained the palm of martyrdom in England. When shortly afterwards the news came, the brethren believed in the truth of the vision. This aged brother died at Douai, December 29, 1652.

LINGEN, FRANCIS, twin brother of Alexius Lingen, came to England when still a cleric, as a member of the newly formed community at Lincoln's Inn Fields. He was afterwards ordained, and approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1689. Though young, he appeared to his brethren an accomplished model of a perfect religious. He was innocent and humble, and seemed always absorbed in prayer. In return he received many special favours from God, but a few months before his death these were all withdrawn, and he suffered intensely from spiritual aridity. After that God visited him again with consolations, and made him understand how much he had merited by this trial. Once more he fell into great anxiety and dryness, but this time for a few days only; for at the conclusion of the Gospel "Ante diem festum Paschæ," which was read to him, he peacefully breathed his last, October 19, 1693, aged twenty-eight.

LOCKIER, WILLIAM A S. FRANCISCO, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions, and also for the mission, in 1686. The following year he came to England as a member of the new friary at Lincoln's Inn Fields. He was imprisoned in Newgate

When he had been labouring on the mission with great zeal for some time, he had to undergo a severe trial. He was reported to his ecclesiastical superiors as neglecting his pastoral duties, and constantly making excursions outside his district, and in neighbouring counties, especially in Derbyshire. But his brethren, as well as the Catholics of the locality, were unanimous in defending his character. It was in these circumstances that he showed the list of his converts, with their places of abode, dated 1737. As a sign that he never lost the confidence of his superiors in the Order, he was made titular Guardian of Cambridge in 1738; Preses of Warwick, 1740-1744; titular Guardian of Newcastle, 1753-1756. idleness, taverns, inns, ale-houses and clubs, which I earnestly beg you to forbear as much as possible. Omit not daily mental prayer, nor an annual recollection. Be punctual and exact in observing the rubrics of both Mass and Office. Be very wary what obligations of Masses and prayers you take, and none of any moment or long duration without the Superior's, or some prudent grave Father's approbation. Extol virtue, cry down vice. Ground your flock in solid piety and devotion; more particularly insisting on matters relating to frequenting the Sacraments, for which catechistical discourse upon the Commandments and the dispositions required for the Sacrament of Penance and the Holy Communion are, in my judgment, the most proper. Let not your manners contradict your doctrine, nor life and actions belie your words. Be zealous for the conversion of souls, but temper zeal with prudence and discretion. Meddle as little as may be with the temporal concerns of your flock, or economy of families; and be not forward in recommending servants or making matches. Remember, perfect expropriation is our great treasure, which we must endeavour to preserve by renouncing all dominion: in the case of money we ought to be very moderate; and in all matters of moment have recourse, if possible, to the Superior."

Broken down by the mission work, Father Parry sought rest at Douai; and at length, after two years illness, he reached the end of his course on August 7, 1720, aged seventy-three years, and professed fifty-eight. He was buried in the cloister on the west side.

PEDLEY, JOSEPH, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1691, and for the mission the following year.

PENNY, FRANCIS, A. S. MARIA, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1668. He was professor of philosophy at Douai from 1668 to 1672, and professor of theology from that year until his death, which happened a couple of years later.

PENNY, ROBERT, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions, and also for the mission, in 1681. Although he did not neglect his spiritual duties, he is said to have indulged somewhat too much in harmless but worldly pastimes, such as driving, hunting and playing loud musical instruments. In consequence, his superiors thought it expedient to give him a gentle reprimand, to which he readily submitted. He died in England in 1721 or 1722.

PERROT, GEORGE, A. S. GULIELMO, entered the Order at Douai in 1618. He was appointed titular Guardian of Berkshire at the first Chapter in 1630; titular Guardian of Greenwich in 1634, and confessor of the nuns of the Third Order at Brussels; Definitor, 1637-1640; elected Provincial in 1640; Commissary in England, 1647-1650; Definitor, 1650-1653; Provincial, 1656-1659. ✓ PORA, CHARLES, was approved for hearing confessions and for the mission in 1655; for preaching the following year. He was confessor at Aire, 1671-1674; titular Guardian of Newcastle, 1674-1677; in 1677 he was again confessor at Bruges, but, getting into bad health, he was sent to England for change of air in 1678; in 1680 he was made Procurator, and filled that office for many years; Definitor, 1683-1686; titular Guardian of Cambridge, 1686-1689; Preses of London, 1689-1692; titular Guardian of London, 1692-1695, when he died on the mission. POTIER, LEWIS, tertiary, described in 1680 as having been a long time in the Order. He died in 1719.

POWELL, GREGORY (baptismal name DAVID), was approved for preaching and hearing confessions, and also for the mission, in 1740. He was Preses of Abergavenny from that year until 1767, with two slight interruptions, one in 1755, the other in 1761 and 1762; titular Guardian of Worcester, 1749-1752;

PRESCOT, THOMAS, lay brother, died at Douai in 1671.

PRICE, BERNARD, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1693, and for the mission in 1698. He was Preses of Mount Grace, 1701-1704; titular Guardian of Bristol, 1716-1719; of Worcester, 1722-1725; of Bristol, 1728-1731, in which year he died in England.

PRICE, PACIFICUS, A S. ALBANO (baptismal name PHILIP), was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1671, when he was also appointed professor of philosophy. With a slight interruption he was professor of theology from 1674 until 1686, when he received the title of Doctor of Divinity. In 1686 he came on the mission and went to East Hendred. He was Custos, 1692-1695; elected Provincial in 1695; again in 1704. He died in May, 1706. He is described as "truly peaceable, and beloved by all."

PRITCHARD, MATTHEW, of the family of the Pritchards of Graig, about half way between Monmouth and Abergavenny, received the Franciscan habit at Douai in 1686. He was appointed professor of philosophy in 1692, and the following year approved for preaching and hearing confessions. He was professor of theology from 1695-1710. In 1705 he was deputed to go to the General Chapter. In 1710 he came to England, and was sent to the Perthyr mission in his native county. He was titular Guardian of Bristol, 1710-1713; Definitor, and Preses of Abergavenny, in 1713. Pope Clement XI. having preferred the first Vicar Apostolic of the Western District, Bishop Ellis, to the See of Segni, issued his bull, dated Rome, September 20, 1713, appointing Father Pritchard titular Bishop of Myrina, and three days later instituted him Vicar Apostolic. Owing to the renewed persecution of Catholics on the accession of King George I., and the unusual delay in the receipt of the bulls, his consecration at Cologne did not take place until Whitsuntide, 1715. It may be mentioned as an illustration of his genuine piety that, when he had been promoted to the episcopal dignity, he promised the fathers that he would continue to say the usual number of Masses for the Religious who died, asking them to do the like for him at his death.

This prudent and zealous prelate went to his eternal reward at Perthyr in 1750, and was buried at St. Kenelm's Church, Rockfield, deanery of Abergavenny. The following epitaph is inscribed on the slab which covers his remains: * admitted at Douai as a tertiary in 1666. His father gave an alms of one hundred pounds at his profession. Afterwards he went to Ireland, where he was ordained priest. A long time afterwards he came on the English mission.

REEVES, LEWIS, A S. MARIA MAGDALENA, born in 1647. At a very early age he entered the Order at Douai. Though young he was a model of mortification to his brethren. At the age of nineteen he became dangerously ill, and was in a few days reduced to the last extremity. As death was approaching, he sang the "Veni Creator" and "Te Deum," which being ended he gave up his soul to God. The religious were greatly astonished and edified, and related that the room was filled with a very sweet odour at the time of his death, which occurred on January 23, 1666. He was buried near the door leading to the garden.

He was elected Provincial in 1824 and re-elected in 1827. In that year he went to Rome on business of the Order, and Father McDonnell, who was then at Witham, wrote to him as follows, on September 1:

HON<sup>d</sup> DEAR SIR,

With my best wishes of a good journey to you, and for your safe and speedy return, I send you the letters of Father General, as you directed . . .

But Father Richards was not to see England again: he died in Rome on December 19, 1828. Bishop Baines, O.S.B., Vicar Apostolic of the Western District, who was then in the Eternal City, attended him, and gave in a letter this account to Father McDonnell: "He died making the sign of the Cross, and embracing the Crucifix. I can truly say that I never beheld a more edifying or saintly death."

The same Prelate ordered the following epitaph, which he himself composed, to be put upon Father Richards' monument in St. Isidore's Church:

ROBERTS, GREGORY, began his noviceship in 1700. At the beginning he was very exact and edifying ; afterwards, however, he failed in obtaining the requisite number of votes for his profession, and it was decided to dismiss him. There is an interesting description of an interview he had with the Jesuit Father Claude de la Colombière, the apostle of the Sacred Heart, who was then residing at St. James's Palace. As it is but little known, we shall insert it here.

"The apostle of the Sacred Heart of Jesus had been sent over by his superiors to visit the Court of the Duchess of York, in order to impart spiritual instruction to the numerous foreigners who had gathered around her in London. He came fresh from Paray-le-Monial, and was full of ardent zeal to propagate the beautiful devotion so lately revealed by our Blessed Lord himself to the saintly nun of the Visitation. During two years he had preached those lessons of Divine love in the Chapel of St. James's, and had kindled the sacred flame in many a breast amid the obloquy and persecution which overshadowed the Faith in England. Some few of our countrymen had contrived to slip in and hearken to his consolatory discourses. They may have imbibed such fervour from the revelations which he disclosed, as to have enabled them to bear the terrible trials in store for them. The love of the Sacred Heart was no new doctrine. It had been revealed to the beloved disciple as he lay upon his Master's breast in the Cœnaculum, and was well known to St. Augustine, St. Bernard and St. Gertrude; but it had recently been manifested with renewed lustre to the Blessed Margaret Mary in the chapel and the garden of the Convent at Paray. The flame then kindled smouldered imperceptibly, and was often seemingly extinct, until two centuries later it burst forth again among our Catholic countrymen, when a pilgrimage departed from our shores to suspend the banners of England over the shrine where the mystery was revealed.

“Father Wall had heard of the famous young Jesuit, and was prepared to meet with one deeply versed in the science of Divine love; but when he found himself in the presence of the holy priest, it seemed to him as if the apostle St. John had reappeared on earth to rekindle those flames from the Heart of Jesus with which his writings abound. His calm and beautiful countenance was precisely such as one may picture that of the beloved disciple who stood beside the Cross when the lance pierced his Master's side, and revealed the material tabernacle of His ardent charity.

“‘Father,’ he said, ‘I am a poor Minorite of St. Francis, come to seek strength and counsel of the Sacred Heart of Jesus, of which you are known far and wide among us as the apostle. Among the friends I longed to see in London is one of your own Society, Father Turner, now a prisoner in Newgate, looking forward to the blessed crown of martyrdom. Had I not been called away by my superiors, I should ere this have been in prison, with the certain prospect of a similar reward, if God but granted me the grace to merit it by my constancy.'

"'My friend,' said the holy man, 'you have indeed come to the fount of graces for the strength you need, and yet none can probe the mysteries of His Heart without tasting of the cup of bitterness which He drained in the Garden of Gethsemani. Whosoever taketh up His Cross and followeth in His wake, though he gain an hundredfold even in this life in the way of consolations, must yet feel the sharp edge of persecution. Oh, that I were granted this great grace which your English priests are reaping in this land of crosses; but God may yet have something in store for me!'

"'Our Lord will not let you go hence, may be, without much suffering,' said Father Joachim of St. Ann; 'but I foresee that your life will be spared to propagate this sweet devotion, and rekindle the flagging zeal in many hearts.'

"Thus communing they spent together that day, which was the Vigil of All Saints, in sweet converse on the love of Jesus; and it was not until after Father Wall had said Mass at the little Altar of the Sacred Heart, which Father de la Colombière had erected in his oratory, that they finally parted at dawn on the feast. The former proceeded in the direction of Charing Cross with a view of returning to his friend's house near to Clerkenwell, where he had left his horse." *

Not long afterwards we find Father Wall again in Worcestershire, which seems to have been the scene of his missionary labours. And there, at the breaking out of Oates's plot, he was apprehended, and after five months' confinement in the county gaol, he was arraigned on April 15, 1679. He suffered death at Worcester on August 22 of the same year, in the 59th year of his age, and the 29th of his religious profession. His head was privately conveyed to Father Leo Randolph, to be sent to St. Bonaventure's at Douai, where it was respectfully kept in the cloister until the time of the French Revolution.

The following note is taken from a paper called "A true relation of some judgments of God against those who accused the priests and other Catholics after the pretended conspiracy in England."

"Before Mr. Johnson the priest was executed in the city of Worcester, Pakington, the justice of the peace who had imprisoned him, as he sat at table at his meal, fell to the ground senseless, and died the next day without having ever been able to utter a word; and his sister-in-law went altogether out of her mind, no one knowing why. A man called Rogers, who betrayed the priest and got him put in prison, going home immediately after the false oath taken in court, when passing a bridge was knocked down by an ox and grievously hurt; and his two companions who had taken a like oath against the said priest, both of them died in a boiling cauldron, where one was trying to help the other who had fallen in ; and the mistress of these two servants, who had advised them to commit the crime, had her own brother imprisoned in Newgate, and, before the priest was put to death, executed for having killed his own illegitimate child."*

He was Preses of Monmouth, 1776-1779; of White Hill in 1779; titular Guardian of York in 1782; Preses of White Hill in 1784; titular Guardian of Worcester in 1785; Preses of Mount Grace in 1787; titular Guardian born in Glamorganshire, and entered the Order at the early age of fifteen. He showed such alacrity in serving and in hearing Mass, that it seemed as if he could find no pleasure in anything else. In his application to study and regularity of life, he was an example to all. He appeared not to lack a single virtue, and never relented from the first fervour of his noviceship. He was looked upon as a saint, not only in the friary, but also in the town of Douai. To the great regret of his brethren God called him out of this vale of tears in 1718, being but in the 21st year of his age, and the 6th of religious life. He was buried in the long cloister on the south side near the door.

WILLIAMSON, AMBROSE, was professor of philosophy at Douai, 1689-1692. In 1691 he was approved for preaching and hearing confessions; professor of theology from 1692 until his death; Guardian of Douai, 1698-1701. In 1699 he was deputed to go to the General Chapter. He died in 1701.

WILLOUGHBY, EGIDIUS, A. S. AMBROSIO, was appointed confessor of the nuns of the Third Order at Brussels in 1630. Titular Guardian of London in 1634, Definitor, 1637-1640; titular Guardian of Chichester in 1640; and of London, 1647-1650; Definitor, 1650-1653; titular Guardian of London, 1653-1656; Definitor, 1656-1659; titular Guardian of Greenwich in 1659. He translated into English the treatise of St. Peter of Alcantara on Mental Prayer. He died in 1660.

WILSON, LEWIS, lay brother, died in 1790.

WINTER, JEROME, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1704, and for the mission in 1708. He was titular Guardian of Oxford, 1713-1716; and 1719-1722; and again in 1723; confessor at Aire, 1725-1731; titular Guardian of Greenwich and confessor at Bruges, 1731-1734; Definitor, 1734-1737; titular Guardian of Greenwich in 1737; of Worcester in 1738; elected Custos in 1740. He was titular Guardian of Cambridge, 1647-1650; of Oxford, 1653-1656; of Cambridge in 1657; Definitor, and also Commissary, 1659-1662; titular Guardian of York, 1662-1665; again elected Definitor in 1665, he died in that office the following year, in England.

WOODCOCK, or OADCOCK, JOHN, alias FRANCIS FARRINGTON, in religion, MARTIN A S. FELICE, VENERABLE, MARTYR, was born at Leyland in Lancashire in 1603. His father was a Protestant, his mother a good Catholic. He was nearly twenty years old when he was received into the Catholic Church. He first studied at St. Omers; afterwards, at the age of twenty-six, he went to the English College, Rome, where he afforded a remarkable example of the mildest disposition.* But he felt an irresistible attraction to a penitential life, and applied for admission among the Capuchins at Paris, where he was received in 1630. It was, however, not God's will that he should remain there. After a few months he was, without any fault of his own, dismissed, chiefly for these reasons: no answer had been obtained to letters of enquiry addressed to his mother and friends in England; his mother and elder brother were opposed to his embracing the religious life; lastly, his health was not good. The youth thereupon went to Douai, and applied for admission among the English Franciscans; and they, judging that he had been unfairly dismissed by the Capuchins, received him into the Order in 1631, when he was clothed with the habit of St. Francis by Father Heath; and at the expiration of his noviceship he made his profession in the hands of Father Bel. He was approved for preaching and hearing confessions, as well as for the mission, in 1637; confessor of the nuns of the Third Order at Nieuport in 1638. After that he came on the mission, and was imprisoned in Lancaster gaol in 1644. He obtained the palm of martyrdom on August 7, 1646, in the forty-fourth year of his age, and the fifteenth of his religious profession.

WOODWARD, ANTHONY, a native of Lancashire, entered the Order at the age of sixteen. All admired his singular devotion to our Blessed Lady; and before her altar he was soon to be laid to rest, for God would not have this pure and innocent soul to be long on earth. He died regretted by all, not fully twenty years old, on April 14, 1686, at Douai, and was buried on the south side of the cloister, right in front of our Lady's altar.

WOODWARD, JOSEPH, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1683, and appointed Vicar of Douai, and the following year also novice master; confessor at Bruges in 1686. He came on the mission in 1687. He was titular Guardian of Coventry, 1691-1694. Love for regular discipline induced him to ask leave to return to Douai. His request was granted. He was appointed Guardian of Douai, 1695-1698; Definitor in 1698, in which office he died about the year 1700.

WOODWARD, MATHIAS, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1704. He died at Douai in 1720.

WOOLMER, JOSEPH, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1657, and for the mission in 1660. He died in 1664 or 1665.

WOOLMER, MASSEUS, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions, and also for the mission, in 1681. He was assistant priest at Mount Grace in 1688. The Spanish ambassador asked to have him for his second chaplain, but it was thought inconvenient to let him go. He was titular Guardian of Canterbury, 1695-1698; of Norwich, 1701-1704; of London in 1705; Definitor, 1707-1710; titular Guardian of Greenwich in 1710; of London in 1711; Definitor, 1713-1716; titular Guardian of London, 1716-1719, in which year he died.

WREST, THOMAS, in religion LEWIS A S. AUGUSTINO, a native of Kent, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1634, and for the mission in 1650. He came to England in 1655. He was titular Guardian of Worcester, 1656-1659; Procurator of the Province, 1659-1665. He worked for many years with great fruit on the mission; then he suffered a long incarceration in Lancaster Castle. On his release he retired to St. Bonaventure's, Douai, where he died, "full of days and good works," on May 8, 1669, in the 73rd year of his age and the 38th of his profession.

✓ WYART, GREGORY, A S. MARIA, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1656, and for the mission in 1660. He was Vicar of Douai, 1668-1671. At his request leave was granted him to go to another Province of our Order in 1672. It seems he did not go, or soon returned, for two years later he was appointed director of the choir at Douai. In 1676 he went as representative of the English Province to the National Congregation of the Order at Antwerp. He was titular Guardian of Norwich, 1680-1683. He died in 1691 or 1692.

YARDLY, LAWRENCE, professed cleric, died at Douai in 1747.

YATES, BERNARD, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1737. He came on the mission, and was appointed Preses of Mount Grace in 1738; of Hexham, 1743-1746; of Birmingham, 1746-1749; of Mount Grace, 1749-1752; titular Guardian of York, 1752-1755; Guardian of Douai, 1755-1758; Definitor, 1758-1761; titular Guardian of Cambridge, 1761-1764; Preses of Hexham in 1764; Definitor, 1764-1767; titular Guardian of Canterbury, 1767-1770; Definitor, 1770-1773; titular Guardian of Newcastle, 1773-1776; Preses of White Hill in 1776, when he was declared a jubilarian. He died in England in 1777 or 1778.

YATES, DANIEL, A S. JOANNE, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions in 1637, and also appointed confessor of the nuns of the Third Order, then at Brussels. The following year he was approved for the mission. He was titular Guardian of Leicester in 1640; and of Worcester, 1647-1650; Definitor, 1650-1653; elected Provincial in 1653. He died in 1659 or 1660.

YOUNG, ANTHONY, A S. FRANCISCO, was approved for preaching and hearing confessions, and also for the mission, in 1674. He was titular Guardian of Canterbury, 1683-1686; and again 1698-1701; titular Guardian of Worcester in 1702; and of Oxford, 1704-1707. He died on the English mission in 1712 or 1713.

The following are the real names or aliases of some of the Religious described above; but there are not sufficient indications to show who they are.

HOUGHTON, MR., was at West Grinstead in 1758, when Father Placid Payne was at Highden. (Father Felix Englefield's list.)

MIDDLETON, F. This name only occurs once, in the year 1701. It may have been an alias for Francis Hardwick.

RIGBY, JAMES, born in 1705, was admitted at the English College, Rome, in 1724, and ordained priest in 1730. Shortly afterwards he went to Douai, where he entered the Franciscan Order, on November 20 of the same year. (Records of the English Province S.J.)

SEYES, alias LAMBERT, ROGER, a native of Glamorgan, brought up a Protestant, became a convert to the Catholic Church in his youth. He was admitted at the English College, Rome, in 1617, and ordained priest on May 16, 1622. He entered the Franciscan Order at the friary of St. Peter in Montorio, Rome, on the feast of the Stigmata, 1622, and after some months left for (Douai) Belgium. (Records of the English Province S.J.)

It seems not improbable that he is the same as BERNARDINE DE SENIS.

VAVASOUR, FRANCIS, of an old Catholic family, son of Thomas Vavasour, who was created a baronet in 1628, and had thirteen children. Francis became a Franciscan at Douai, and had died a holy death before the year 1672. (Records of the English Province S.J.; Troubles, p. 459.)

We meet sometimes with other names in the seventeenth century to which is added "Franciscan," or "Grey Friar:" we may safely assume that, except in case of an alias, it is a mistake.

EPILOGUE.

It was a fine summer evening in 1848. A carriage drove smartly through the dusty streets of Taunton, towards the Franciscan Convent, at the far end of the town.

The visitor was evidently expected, for the Sisters, with the children arranged in due order, had held themselves in readiness for some time. "There he is!" they whispered at last; the door of the carriage was thrown open, and the aged and saintly Bishop of Liège, Cornelius van Bommel, stepped out. When the blessing had been given and received in respectful silence, the air rang with joyous peals of welcome.

"My Lord," said the Mother Abbess, "it is extremely kind of you to come to see us, after the long journey you had undertaken to assist at the opening of St. George's Cathedral."

The Bishop replied: "I could not well decline coming to the inauguration of what was once 'the Belgian Chapel.'* And, after that, I could not forego the pleasure of coming a little further, to see the nuns of the Third Order of the great St. Francis, for whom I have always cherished a special veneration."

"Half a century has passed, my Lord," explained Mother Abbess, "since we had to leave your country, where we, as well as our Fathers, had been so hospitably received, and spent many a happy and peaceful day. And now we are doubly glad to welcome you, as the Pastor of the diocese where our fathers found a shelter, when they were expelled from Douai."

"They would have found a lasting home with us," said the bishop, "had not the French come to continue in Catholic Belgium also their disgraceful work of profanation and destruction."

"Alas!" exclaimed the Abbess, "we have lost nearly all our fathers. Scarce half-a-dozen remain: they are getting old, scattered over the country, and there is no hope of their recruiting new members. I wish our Holy Father St. Francis would come to our assistance. But, my Lord, have you any Franciscans in your diocese?"

"Oh yes!" answered the Prelate, "there are in my diocese three Franciscan friaries, which the Fathers have recovered since the French Revolution.* The Franciscans are multiplying rapidly in Belgium, and considering that it is not much more than a dozen years since they were allowed by the law to live in community, their increase is most wonderful."

"Will your Lordship excuse me," pleaded the Abbess, "for making so free as to ask what kind of men they are?"

"They are very exemplary," the Bishop explained, "and a source of edification to the faithful, and among them many learned and holy men. But, Mother Abbess, you ought to know them, for they are the very Fathers that lived side by side with the English Franciscans before the Revolution. When religious Houses were allowed to be reopened, a handful of veterans, who had survived the storms of fifty years, returned to their old homes. I have been told of one of those good old Franciscans,† that he was often seen kissing the steps that lead to the choir."

† Father James Vergauwen.

"My Lord!" exclaimed the Abbess, "send us a few of those men!"

"Now, Mother Abbess," said the Bishop, "you know that you are asking something which is beyond my power. But for the love of dear St. Francis I promise you that I shall do what I can in the matter. And if I fail to succeed, it will not be my fault." *

The Bishop was as good as his word. On his return to Belgium he went straight to the Provincial, and succeeded so well in persuading him, that he lost no time in calling his Definitory together, and laying the matter before them. And they, as zealous children of St. Francis, consented to undertake the arduous task. Ten years, however, were still to elapse before all the arrangements were completed, and the fathers came.

But the record of their labours and vicissitudes must be left to another chronicler.
